Rosenwald Project Earning Profit.

The annual report of the Michigan Boulevard Garden apartments was made public yesterday. The housing project, conceived by Julius Rosenwald, is making money. It is not piling up huge profits, but it is showing a moderate return on the investment, even in a period of depression.

Some three years ago Mr. Rosenwald determined to combine business with philanthropy in a new venture. As he rode to his office on the west side, he explained to an interviewer not long ago, he was obliged to pass miles of ancient buildings, many of them erected shortly after the great fire. These were the homes of tens of thousands of his fellow citizens. They were not pleasant or wholesome places in which to live and bring up a family. Mr. Rosenwald wondered whether it was possible, with the economies to be expected of large scale building and financing, to provide better housing at rentals which could be afforded by families of small income.

Experiment in New Field.

With the means at his disposal, Mr. Rosenwald might, of course, have erected a model apartment building and rented flats at as low a price as he chose to set, whether the income from the building yielded a fair return on the investment or not. Mr. Rosenwald had given away many millions, but this time, he explained to those to whom he presented his idea, he wished to experiment in a new field. He wanted to find out whether large scale housing operations could be made to pay. If they could, he said, and if the fact could be demonstrated, there was reason to believe that conservative private capital, seeking security and a moderate return rather than large speculative profits, would flow into such ventures.

That was the genesis of the Michigan Boulevard Garden apartments. Since then the business depression has intervened and in consequence a new purpose has been injected into the experiment.

May Bring Back Prosperity.

"Economists tell us that what we need today is another automobile industry to restore employment and prosperity. We have all been scanning the horizon in search for such an industry but we have not found it. For a time we thought it might be radio or television, but neither of these seems to meet the need. Of late it has occurred to quite a number of people that what we are looking for may be right under our noses. The industry which may bring back prosperity could very well be the business of providing better living accommodations to families of moderate means. For a decade and more our prosperity was founded upon supplying automobiles to persons of limited income. Perhaps we would do as well by supplying the even greater need for places to live.

Capital Is Needed.

"We used to think of model housing as a means of promoting the welfare of society. Now we are thinking of it as a means of restoring economic stability. If we could induce capital to flow into housing projects, for which the need is incalculable, as any one must admit who travels about any of our great cities, there would be no unemployment of building mechanics to trouble us for a generation. The incomes of the railroads from hauling building materials would be greatly increased. And so on.

"The nation is on a dead center economically although there is plenty of money available for investment to move on the success of the Mellon loan indicated. If some of it could be invested in housing, or, in other words, if housing can be shown to be safely profitable, our economic difficulties will begin to fade."

Circumstances Are Unfavorable.

As explained by Alfred K. Stern, a director of the Rosenwald fund, the Michigan Boulevard experiment was necessarily undertaken under unfavorable circumstances. The apartments were to be rented only to those who constitute, according to

Calls on Lawyers to Advise Him.

Al Capone's fate was in the hands of his lawyers yesterday. It was reported that he was considering payment of his debt to society without a fight—that pleas of guilty were being pondered by the gang leader and his attorneys on both the federal indictments that have been returned against him in the last few days.

One indictment charges Capone with the evasion of $215,000 in income taxes and the other charges him and 68 of his men with a ten year beer conspiracy in which they are alleged to have taken in gross receipts of $200,000,000.

The reports were that Capone was giving his lawyers some good reasons for entering pleas of guilty, and that, on the other hand, the lawyers and some of Capone's allies were pointing out certain dangers attendant on such pleas.

Johnson Declines Comment.

District Attorney George E. Q. Johnson, under whose direction the investigation of Capone was conducted, refused yesterday to discuss any possible compromises by the government.

Whatever Capone's decision, it will have to be made by tomorrow when he is to be arraigned before Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson on both indictments.

If Capone decides to face juries and is convicted on both the prohibition and income tax indictments, which the prosecutors regard as likely, he is liable to a maximum penalty of thirty-four years in prison and fines totaling $90,000. It is reported that this has caused the gangster to consider pleading guilty.

Concurrent Terms Probable.

On the other hand, lawyers are agreed that the government cannot hope for such a sentence and that the prison terms on the various counts will in all probability be made to run concurrently. As one government lawyer pointed out, "the charges against Capone involve only the tax laws and prohibition. He is not charged with murder as no doubt he ought to be."

It is reported that it is Capone's desire to plead guilty with the understanding that he is to serve a prison sentence, though not too long a one. A term of less than five years is his hope, it is said.

This was the punishment imposed on Jack Guzik, one of Capone's chief lieutenants, for income tax fraud, but the Guzik sentence followed conviction by a jury and Capone is said to feel that if he pleaded guilty he could do no worse than Guzik and might do considerably better despite his nation-wide bad reputation.

Three Years for Brother Ralph.

His brother, Ralph Capone, after a trial lasting three weeks, was sentenced to three years in prison for income tax fraud. Under the various counts with which he was charged the sentence could have been twenty-two years. At the time the Ralph Capone sentence was the most severe in the history of income tax fraud cases. Then came the Guzik case, lasting two weeks. Guzik faced the possibility of an eighteen year sentence. He was given five years which still remains the record sentence for income tax fraud throughout the United States.

Government prosecutors say that if Capone elects to fight and is convicted he can stall off his passage through the portals of Leavenworth prison for at least two years. It is known that District Attorney Johnson has been hopeful throughout the long investigation that Capone could be gotten to prison before the Chicago World's Fair of 1933.

If Capone offers to plead guilty the district attorney's office will be confronted with the question: Capone in prison now for four or five years, or Capone to prison two years hence for a longer term.

Dangers in Guilty Plea.

There is danger for Capone, however, in a plea of guilty, it was pointed out, and it was to cogitate these points that the gang chief's lawyers forsook their golf games yesterday.

The problem was outlined thus: If Capone pleads guilty to the beer conspiracy indictment, he will leave his 68 co-defendants in the lurch. The

U. S. Bares War Force; Is Hint to Others

Washington, D. C., June 14.—[Special.]—The United States government today inaugurated a movement to force into the open complete figures outlining the armaments of the nations of the world prior to the convening of the general arms conference called by the league of nations for next February.

HENRY L. STIMSON. [H. & E.]

As an example to other powers Secretary Stimson today made public American figures showing the land, naval, and air armaments of the United States. These statistics, compiled at the request of the league of nations, were embodied in a typewritten thirty-six page report replete with tables and figures giving the exact number of men, warships, and aircraft maintained for military and naval purposes by the United States.

Reserves Included in Figures.

The American tables carry the total number of American army reserves, although this information was not specifically asked for by the league. The emphasis placed on this section of the armament figures was interpreted here as a move to force the army reserve problem out into the open, despite the reluctance of France and certain other European nations to limit this phase of national defense.

The purpose of the American move in behalf of coeplete publicity was to give impetus to the general disarmament movement, and if possible to clear away storm clouds now threatening to break up the scheduled parley. Secretary of State Stimson was reported today as feeling that the American example in giving publicity to its national defense figures will have the effect of smoking out other nations, especially Russia, who have exhibited reluctance in making their armament figures public. The theory is that the American action will have the effect of mobilizing world public opinion back of a move for complete armaments publicity. Russia, whose figures have been filed at Geneva, had not made them public up to today.

Presages Active Part in Parley.

In diplomatic and official circles the Stimson move was interpreted as indicating that the United States intends to take an active part in the league conference, although the American military establishment already has been cut to where army officials state there is no possibility of any nation cutting to the point where this country would be affected. Whether the interest of the United States in the success of the conference will go so far as to result in an American reversal of its former stand against the budgetary method of limiting armaments has not been made known, although there are indications this may be the case. Hitherto the United States has opposed the budgetary system on the theory it is easier to hide a dollar than a rifle.

All governments were asked by J. A. Avenol, acting secretary general of the league of nations, to furnish particulars with regard to "the position of their armaments and all data, technical and otherwise, which might help to inform the (disarmament) conference and to justify such concrete proposals as the governments lay before it." The state department, in complying with this request, went a step further than was required by the league communication. Nothing was said in the call for these data about making them public.

Declares for Publicity.

In its answer to the league inclosing the figures the American government states:

"While the secretary of state has

BULLETIN.

ST. NAZAIRE, France, June 15, —(Special.)—In a telephone conversation with authorities here at 5 a. m. the postmaster at Noirmoutiers reported that at least 445 lives must have been lost when the St. Philbert sank. He said there were 467 passengers aboard besides the captain and a crew of six men, making a total of 474. Because of bad weather, five remained in Noirmoutiers. Seventeen others returned to Nantes overland. With seven survivors there are thus only 29 living persons accounted for of the 474.

ST. NAZAIRE, France, June 14.—At least 350 men, women and children were drowned tonight when the excursion steamer St. Philbert, hit by a great wave during a storm, capsized and sank off Point St. Gildas, near St. Nazaire on the west coast of France.

Only eight survivors were picked up by rescue boats sent out to aid the stricken ship. All were men. The bodies of four women were recovered by the Pornic, one of the tugboats sent to the rescue. The rescuers said they were certain all others on the ship were dead.

The disaster occurred at 6:30 o'clock when the St. Philbert, homeward bound with a holiday crowd from the island of Noirmoutier, ran into the midst of a terrific windstorm which for six hours had been whipping the Brittany coast. The passengers flocked to the port side of the ship to escape the violence of the wind, and when the giant roller caught the boat their added weight carried the steamer over on its side against Chatelliers, a rocky reef.

Had Spent Day Picknicking.

Most of the passengers were members of the Coöperative Society of Loire Inferieure, which chartered the St. Philbert for a day's outing on Noirmoutier. The boat left Nantes this morning with 487 passengers. The trip to Noirmoutier was rough and a hundred or more of the passengers became seasick. Some of these remained on the island when the St. Philbert started back shortly after 3 o'clock, preventing a greater toll of life.

The passengers had spent the day picknicking and disporting themselves on the sandy beaches of Noirmoutier. The day was hot and men, women, and children were laughing and singing as they boarded the ship for the return trip.

An hour later the St. Philbert ran into a cyclonic wind. Lowering clouds darkened the sky, and mountainous waves surged over the deck of the boat.

Battles Against Waves.

For an hour the St. Philbert battled the waves, while the passengers, who could not crowd into the cabins, sought the protected side of the boat. Suddenly, while entering shallow water, just off Point St. Gildas, the little 100 foot long steamer seemed to poise on the crest of a wave. The captain was seen to run a distress signal to the masthead. Then the boat turned over, disappearing in a tremendous wave.

Witnesses standing on the Loire estuary said the St. Philbert was in distress for a half hour before it was swallowed up in the surf. Word of the disaster was immediately flashed to St. Nazaire by the lighthouse keeper at Point St. Gildas, and tugs set out to the scene of the wreck. For hours the tugs worked in the heaving waters and the first to return, the Pornic, brought back one survivor and the bodies of four women. Some time later a pilot boat returned with seven more survivors and reported that darkness had practically stopped all rescue efforts.

Search Shore for Bodies.

Authorities of the cities of Nantes and St. Nazaire rushed to points nearest the wreck to direct rescue work, but they were able to do nothing as not even the bodies of the drowned were visible in the churning waters.

Late tonight villagers are pacing the beach with lighted flares hoping to pick up bodies from the ship, but oldtime mariners who know these waters hold little hope that many bodies will be washed up since where the boat sank there is a strong current out to sea.

POLICE FIND OUT WHY MEN SING IN VACANT LOTS

Lieut. Hugh McNally and Sergt. Joseph Murrin of the Des Plaines street police were puzzled and annoyed last evening. Every half hour there came a telephone call to the effect that tipsy men were making merry and waxing loud in some vacant lot. The locations mentioned were, in order, Peoria and Randolph streets, Jackson boulevard and Peoria street, Racine avenue and Washington boulevard, Adams and Des Plaines streets, and Racine avenue and Monroe street.

So McNally and Murrin set out to find out how such things could be. At Adams and Aberdeen streets they met a friendly man who asked for the price of a drink, which was given to him. Then the lieutenant and the sergeant followed him.

The man fled behind a signboard in a vacant lot next to 1159 Adams street, where Edward Eldridge, 1158 Adams street, had set up a temporary bar and was dispensing moonshine to a moderately enthusiastic clientele at 25 cents a half pint. Eldridge admitted that he had moved his wares in satchels six times during the evening.

Boy Scouts See Comrade Drown as Canoe Capsizes

In view of friends on shore, William Flint, 17 years old, of Glen Ellyn, a Boy Scout, was drowned yesterday when his canoe capsized in Hastings lake, two miles east of Lake Villa. A companion, whose name was not learned, saved himself by clinging to the overturned craft until aid arrived. The boys, members of a Du Page county Scout troop, were attending an encampment at the lake. When the canoe capsized, Flint, witnesses said, tried to swim to shore.

Masked Gunman Holds Up Guests in Wilmette Home

A masked gunman entered the home of Herman Katz at 515 Central avenue, Wilmette, early yesterday morning and after holding up Mr. and Mrs. Katz and eight guests, who were playing cards, escaped with $150 and a diamond ring. The ring belonged to Mrs. James Loeb, 545 South Sheridan road, Highland Park.

Hoover Starts His Trip to 3 Crucial States

Orange, Va., June 14.—[Special.]—Fresh from a restful two days at his Rapidan fishing camp, President Hoover, accompanied by Mrs. Hoover, boarded his special train here this evening and set out for a trip to the midwest that he hopes will have significant political consequences.

If there had been any doubt that Mr. Hoover intended to make the run for renomination and reëlection it was set at rest by last week's young Republican conference in Washington. The President heads into the west with the laudatory speeches of cabinet officers and Republican spokesmen, made at the conference, still echoing pleasantly.

Goes to Woo Back Waverers.

President Hoover's Memorial day speech at Valley Forge, and the happy evening amid the enthusiasm of Philadelphia's Union League club which preceded it, were interpreted in political terms as his gesture in the face of Pennsylvania Pinchotism. Looked at through the same political spectacles, his journey to the midwest is being put down as a visit to a territory where a sight of the captain is essential if a somewhat alarming tendency to desert the Republican ship is to be checked.

He will reach Indianapolis tomorrow afternoon, and in the evening will address the banquet of the Indiana Republican Editorial association. On Tuesday the President will go to Marion, O., to dedicate the Harding memorial. On Wednesday he will dedicate the remodeled tomb of Abraham Lincoln at Springfield, Ill.

Visits Three Crucial States.

By the time, therefore, that he returns to Washington on Thursday he will have made personal appearances in the three midwestern states considered essential to a 1932 success. Those three states represent 68 electoral votes out of the total of 531.

All three of them went Democratic in 1912, and one of them, Ohio, gave a majority to President Wilson in 1916. But the Republican party leaders do not have to go back so far to find cause for worry. Illinois, Ohio, and Indiana showed alarming Democratic trends no longer ago than last November.

Illinois replaced a Republican senator with a Democrat and sent five additional Democrats to the house in place of Republicans. Ohio elected a Democrat governor, the same Gov. White who will greet the President, a Democrat senator and replaced six Republican representatives with Democrats. Indiana sent six Democrats to congress in place of Republicans.

SEIZE SUSPECT AFTER BOMBING; FIND EXPLOSIVE

Emil Klatt, 51 years old, was arrested early this morning for questioning in connection with the daylight bombing last evening of the 26th Street Electric shop at 41 West 26th street. A short time later detectives raided his room at 746 Oakwood boulevard and seized a small quantity of pyrotol, a high explosive.

The arrest was made on complaint of Frank Wallweber, owner of the 26th street store. He charged that Klatt last Monday had asked him to store 57 pounds of dynamite in the shop. He refused, and several days later, he said, Klatt returned and exploded a few percussion caps in front of the store. A fist fight started and Klatt, Wallweber said, threatened him.

Wallweber accompanied Sergt. Michael Touhey and his bomb squad in search for Klatt. The detectives found the suspect at 41st street and Cottage Grove avenue. He denied Wallweber's accusations. Police records show that Klatt was first arrested in 1902, and was sentenced to 90 days in jail. He was seized and sentenced several times since. A police notation also shows that he was wanted for a showup in connection with the Wieboldt store safe blowing last winter, in which more than $50,000 was stolen.

"The wind had been blowing hard all day in gusts, and with hurricane violence at times," he said. "After 4 o'clock it grew worse, and when we came near Chatellier bank where the water is shallow, the waves were so high and fierce that most of the passengers who could not find shelter in the cabins went over to the port side to keep dry."

Ship Hit by Wave; Keels Over.

"With my mother, whom I did not see again and who must have been drowned, I stayed on the starboard side. We were just saying that soon we would be within shelter of the estuary when we felt the boat begin to keel over with the weight of the people who had crowded to the port side and with the weight of the wind and the waves on the starboard side.

"An enormous wave bore down on us just at that instant. The ship turned completely over and sank at once by the stern. How I escaped I do not know. I was dragged deep into the water, but being on the topside had more chance to come up again than those on the port side.

"It seemed hours while I was deep in the water. When I rose I saw an oar floating on the surface and gripped it. Not far away there was a boat floating, half full of water, with several people clinging to it. We managed to scramble in but the waves were so violent that it capsized almost at once. We righted it again, swimming as best we could.

"Even while we were trying to do so, two more of our little number were swept away by the waves. On the surface of the water there were people struggling and crying everywhere in those first few dreadful minutes. Their shrieks could be heard even above the wind as, one by one, we saw them sink and could do nothing to save them.

"Our boat turned over twice more, and only seven of us were still clinging to it when the tug came and saved us."

Whole Region in Mourning.

Berthy said that many of the passengers remained at Noir Moutier because they feared a storm would result from the oppressive heat which beat down during the day. Others, he said, stayed there on account of seasickness and planned either to take another boat back to Nantes or wait for low tide and walk back over the sand ridge which connects the island with the mainland.

The eight survivors will recover from injuries or exposure, local doctors said. None of the bodies which were found have been identified.

This whole region was plunged into grief by the disaster. Most of the victims were workers and their families of Nantes, and their friends immediately began anxious inquiries to find who were among the passengers on the St. Philbert. The port authorities at St. Nazaire tonight were not able to give a complete passenger list.

Albert Thomas, director of the international labor bureau of the league of nations, and president of the National Labor Recreation society, to which many of the victims belonged, telephoned from Geneva tonight, offering sympathy to relatives of the St. Philbert's passengers.

Storm Drives Away Beach Crowds.

Th storm which wrecked the St. Philbert was one of the freakish gales peculiar to this region. A hurricane wind came up whipping the sea into a mountain of waves. Heavy seas swelled up on all the beaches, driving off mainland bathers who had sought relief in the water on the first sweltering day of the season.

At the beginning of the storm the wind stirred the sand on the shore into opaque whirlwinds which wheeled up and down scattering promenaders who had come down to the surf walks for their regular promenades. Only a few people were on the shore, therefore, to witnesses the distress of the St. Philbert, which went down in sight of the land. The storm was still pounding away at midnight when the last of the rescue tugs returned.

Nantes in Mourning.

PARIS, June 14.—The St. Philbert was a ship of 189 tons, 100 feet long 22 feet wide, with an 8 foot draught.

The country of Nantes tonight is in deep mourning. There were very few families which did not have some relative on the ill fated pleasure boat. In some cases whole families are believed to have perished, and tomorrow a roll call of the factories will tell the dreadful toll of the disaster.

Those who landed at Pornic on the return journey because of seasickness or fear are torn between thankfulness and distress. In some cases wives landed, while their husbands and children continued the trip. It is believed that more than 100 left the ship and thus were saved, but the figures still are very indefinite.

SHIP CAPSIZES

Map shows Point St. Gildas, where French excursion steamer St. Philbert capsized yesterday. It was loaded with at least 350 excursionists from Nantes, most of whom, in addition to the crew, were drowned. The boat was caught in a sudden squall and driven on Chatellier rock off Point St. Gildas. The victims were returning from a picnic on Noirmoutier island.

ST. NAZAIRE, PORT OF DISASTER, IS KNOWN TO YANKS

Used by U. S. Troops in the World War.

St. Nazaire, near which the steamer St. Philbert sank yesterday, is rated seventh among the ports of France. Hundreds of thousands of American soldiers passed through this city of 35,000, either on their way to the battlefields of the world war or on their way home after the armistice. It was an American base port.

The city lies at the mouth of the River Loire and came into prominence only about sixty to seventy years ago, when ships began to find it increasingly difficult to ascend the river to Nantes.

Improved by Americans.

During the war its harbor facilities were improved under American direction. Extensive quays were built, which are still in existence, to aid in the landing of troops and in the handling of supplies for them.

Debarkation and embarkation camps for the American expeditionary forces were established on the heights outside the town, and the march up the hills is still an unpleasant memory among many ex-doughboys.

The country about St. Nazaire possesses considerable in the way of historical and literary interest. Slightly north of west from the mouth of the Loire is the famous Belle Isle mentioned frequently in the works of Dumas.

An Ancient Roman Port.

St. Nazaire itself is believed to have been built on the site of the ancient city of Corbilo, in Roman days a principal Gallic seaport. It took the name of St. Nazaire in the 4th century, after St. Felix of Nantes converted a Saxon population which had settled there.

ONE DEAD, MANY HURT IN FREAK ENGLISH STORM

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, June 14.—Freakish weather, whirlwind gales and terrific thunderstorms swept many parts of England today, just seven days after earthquake shocks shook the country. One woman was killed, dozens were injured, houses were demolished and roofs were torn off by the gale which left a trail of damage, particularly in the Midlands and in areas of Worcestershire and Wales.

Many towns, including Blackpool and Cheltenham, where there was an abnormal rainfall, experienced the worst floods in years.

DEATH STEAMER NAMED FOR SAINT OF EARLY FRANCE

The steamer St. Philbert which capsized off Point Gildas, France, taking most of its passengers to death, was named after St. Philbert, who in 680 founded the Her monastery on the island of Noirmoutier, where the victims of the disaster had spent the day. It was from a contraction of "Her Monasterium" that the island derived its name. St. Philbert's monastery prospered until the year 825 when it was pillaged by the Normans. His tomb on the island is now empty.

There are two communities on Noirmoutier island which is 22 square miles in area, one sixth of which is composed of sand dunes. Ruins of the Her monastery and 12th century Notre Dame de la Blance abbey may be seen as well as ruins of earlier Roman buildings.

North of the port of Noirmoutier lies a pleasant watering place surrounded by evergreen and oak trees. This region is lined with sandy beaches which attract merrymakers from the mainland. The few inhabitants of the island are fishermen, oyster breeders and salt marsh workers.

COLLISION SINKS ITALIAN LINER; NO ONE INJURED

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LA HAVRE, France, June 14.—The French liner Rochambeau, carrying 45 passengers, among them 24 American entertainers, writers and business men, returned to La Havre today after crashing into the Italian steamer Ungheria. No one was hurt.

The Ungheria was badly rammed through her hull and began to sink immediately. Lifeboats were at once lowered and the Rochambeau, though damaged but in no grave danger, aided in the rescue work by lowering her own lifeboats.

Twenty-nine of the crew of the Italian steamer were picked up and taken aboard the Rochambeau. The rescue was effected in a calm sea. The Ungheria, a vessel of 2,000 tons, sank in 17 minutes.

The Rochambeau's passengers are returning to Paris. They will sail for America on the Ile de France, which will leave La Havre on Wednesday. The Italian sailors were sent to their homes immediately.

Engine Breaks Down in Heavy Seas.

New York, June 14.—[Special.]—The submarine Nautilus, equipped by Sir Hubert Wilkins to withstand the rigors of exploration under the polar ice, was rolling tonight in the heavy seas of the mid-Atlantic, its engines crippled by a combination of circumstances growing out of rough weather.

Standing by, ready to take the unwieldy craft in tow, were two American warships, the Arkansas and the Wyoming, which had started simultaneously to its aid when the first signal of distress went out from the Nautilus radio at 10 o'clock yesterday morning.

To Be Shackled to Warship.

A message received here tonight by the naval communications station said that a tow line had been attached to the Nautilus from the Wyoming, and that all was safe for the night. The message, as received here, directly from the Nautilus, at 10:4 p. m., said that the Nautilus would be shackled to either the Wyoming or the Arkansas by daybreak. The work was being done under the powerful searchlights from the two battleships.

The position of the Nautilus, according to messages relayed here by the U.S. Arcturus from the S.S. Independence Hall, when the first need for aid became apparent, was latitude 46.12 and longitude 21.40, which would place the vessel approximately 1,000 miles west of the French coast, 800 northeast of the Azores, and 1,700 east of Provincetown, Cape Cod, the place it left on June 4 on its way to Land's End, England, thence via Bergen, Norway, to Spitzbergen.

The first message received by the navy department, the Associated Press reported, was flashed to the naval communications station at Washington by Rear Admiral Claude O. Bloch, commanding the Battleships Wyoming and Arkansas.

The tow to Queenstown is nearly 1,000 miles, and while either of the battleships is well equipped for that purpose, it was apparently considered too dangerous to fasten a tow line in the heavy seas of this afternoon.

Middleman on Battleships.

According to the Associated Press both the Wyoming and the Arkansas were bound for Europe with 975 Annapolis midshipmen on their summer cruise. They were only 50 miles away when their radio picked up the distress signals. However, the Independence Hall was even nearer.

The Nautilus, before it was assigned to Sir Hubert Wilkins for polar exploring purposes, was the navy submarine S-4. It left Provincetown under the command of Capt. Sloan Danenhower. Capt. Sir Hubert Wilkins, the crew, and 18 scientists made up the rest of the party on board.

On Saturday, a cracked cylinder caused the failure of the starboard engine. Even without that engine, the vessel was able to proceed at eight knots, with the weather good. The weather grew rougher, however, the batteries grew weaker, and by midday today, radio communication with the submarine became a one way affair, to a large extent.

REALTY OWNERS WARNED TO JOIN DRIVE ON WEEDS

Liable to Fines Under Illinois Law.

BY PAUL POTTER.

Owners of large tracts of vacant property inside the city limits are just as liable for permitting such unlawful weeds as Canada thistle to grow as are farmers, according to officials of the Illinois department of agriculture at Springfield, who are sponsoring campaigns to enforce the state noxious weed law.

Field demonstrations of methods of eradicating the thistle were held last week in La Salle, Piatt, and Champaign counties. According to Albert C. Wilson of the state division of plant industry, a demonstration will be held near Barrington for Cook county land owners, probably on June 27. Philip Haner, superintendent of the state's enforcement agency, is in charge of these demonstrations.

Up to Subdivision Owners.

While the weeds are no worse than usual, Wilson and Haner declare, the administration of the law providing a fine for those who allow Canada thistle to grow unmolested is made more difficult since many owners of real estate subdivisions have paid little heed to riddance measures.

"Now is the best time to get busy," Mr. Wilson said yesterday. "By cutting the weeds, reseeding may be prevented. However, the most effective method, used last year by many county and city commissioners appointed to enforce the law, is to have owners spray the weeds with a solution of one pound of sodium or calcium chlorate to one gallon of water."

Urge Spraying of Other Weeds.

Such other weeds as ragweed, bindweed and quack grass will also be treated effectively in this spraying, the authorities have informed farmers and subdividers. A bill is now before the house of representatives at Springfield which would include sowthistle [yellow flowered] with Canada thistle [purple flowered] as subject to destruction. The bill also would make land owners liable to fines for failure to eradicate sowthistle.

One Chicago real estate man with large vacant holdings described the methods he employed in checking weeds, using two trucks equipped with sprayers, in addition to mowing by machine. He expects to repeat this season the methods he found successful last summer in complying with the law.

He Saw Lincoln

James Abbott, old time newspaper man, will add another President to the long list of the nation's chief executives whom he has seen. The first was Lincoln.

Mr. Abbott will be a member of the Hamilton club party which is to attend the rededication of the Lincoln tomb at Springfield by President Hoover on Wednesday. His big inspiration is to look at Mr. Hoover.

It was at Hudson, O., in February, 1861, that Mr. Abbott saw Lincoln. In subsequent years he saw Presidents Johnson, Grant, Hayes, Garfield, Arthur, Cleveland, Harrison, McKinley, Roosevelt, Taft, Wilson, Harding and Coolidge. Moreover, both as a stenographic reporter and newspaper man he "covered" many of those national leaders.

New York, June 14.—[Special.]—The investigation into the mysterious death of Starr Faithful, whose body was cast up by the sea at Long Beach a week ago today, was continued today in Manhattan where members of her family were questioned again and a statement taken from a prisoner in the west side jail.

Meanwhile it was reported in Mineola, where the Nassau county grand jury is to resume its inquiry into the case tomorrow, that District Attorney Elvin N. Edwards will make public the contents of Miss Faithfull's diary, which is report to contain frequent references to an influential and prominent man whom she knew.

Eliminate 19 from Suspicion.

Although nineteen men mentioned by their initials in the diary already have been identified and eliminated from suspicion, it was reported that there are several others whose full names have not been discovered. Mr. Edwards is said to entertain the hope that if the contents of the diary are made public the initials may be recognized.

The prisoner who was questioned by Sergt. James Mayforth of the Nassau county homicide squad and a New York City detective was Henry Goldstein, who is being held as a fugitive from California, where he is wanted to answer a charge of larceny.

It was reported that Goldstein, who was arrested on June 9, the day after Miss Faithfull's body was found by a beachcomber, had given the detectives important information regarding the case. After taking a written statement from the prisoner the detectives rushed downtown to the Faithfull apartment on St. Luke's place to give it to Martin W. Littleton Jr., Mr. Edwards' chief assistant, and Inspector Harold R. King, chief of the Nassau county detectives, who were questioning members of the dead girl's family.

Decline to Discuss Story.

None of the officials would disclose the nature of Goldstein's story, but Gray upon returning to the West 47th street station asserted it was "vitally important" and explained it could not be revealed at the present time without interfering with the work of Mr. Edwards and his staff. At the time of his arrest, Goldstein gave 38 Gramercy park as his address, but inquiries there tonight failed to disclose any one there who had ever heard of him.

Stanley E. Faithfull, the dead girl's stepfather, and her sister Elizabeth Tucker Faithfull said they never had heard Starr mention any one named Goldstein and were at a loss to explain his connection with the case. While Faithfull was talking to newspaper men, awaiting the arrival of Mr. Littleton and Inspector King, his wife, Mrs. Helen McGregor Faithfull, came out and said that Elizabeth was ill.

Faithfull stepped back into the apartment, poured something out of a bottle, and gave it to his stepdaughter. Then he came out again into the hallway and was there to greet his questioners on the threshhold when they arrived from Mineola later in the evening.

Sylvia Is Questioned.

The visit of Mr. Littleton and Inspector King was prompted by a desire on their part to question the stepfather more fully before calling him for the second time before the grand jury tomorrow. Elizabeth, or Sylvia, as she often called herself, was questioned all Saturday afternoon at Mineola.

Inspector King, before leaving for Mineola, made it clear also that he hoped to obtain the permission of the family to make a thorough search of their apartment, in which Miss Faithfull's diary was found after her stepfather had assured the authorities that she never had kept one. Other documents said to strengthen the theory that she was murdered subsequently were found as the result of another search.

apparent fear of the gang chief and his advisers is that these 68 men will also rush in with pleas of guilty in an effort to save themselves and in so doing may disclose information about murders and other crimes incident to the beer business which have so far been mysteries.

Another danger in pleading guilty, according to government officials, is that if Capone starts making any admissions or his co-defendants start telling the truth about his liquor activities, the government may be able to reindict him on many specific charges under the Jones law. This law permits a five year sentence and a $10,000 fine for each specific violation of the Volstead act.

Meets Legal Advisers Today.

One of the battery of attorneys which is weighing the questions involved in the situation said that Capone will meet with his legal advisors this morning to decide whether to follow his inclination and plead guilty or give heed to the suggestions of some of his lawyers that he has a chance to beat the income tax charge and later plead guilty to the prohibition indictment, getting off with a year or two on the latter. Capone was said to have spent yesterday in a retreat in Michigan.

It was learned that among those with whom he is consulting is the law firm of Nash and Ahern. Attorneys Thomas D. Nash and Michael J. Ahern have liberated several of Capone's men charged with murder, among them John Scalisi and Albert Anselmi, who killed two policemen in a daylight gun battle.

Attorney Ahern admitted he had received a call for aid from Capone, but said he did not know whether he would respond.

Indicate He Has Money.

That Capone, who is only 32 years old, might have plenty of money to live in luxury after a stretch of several years in Leavenworth was indicated yesterday from two sources. This information seemed to belie some of the statements made by federal authorities that Capone is nearly broke.

The Associated Press carried a dispatch from Washington reporting that "an offer of several millions" was made by attorneys for Capone in an effort to settle the gangster's income tax troubles. This offer the government turned down.

Also, information reached government agents here that as late as last March Capone purchased $1,000,000 worth of Liberty bonds and that a few weeks ago he bought $500,000 of the recent issue of $500,000,000 of treasury bonds. It was also learned that he has established a trust fund at a New York bank for the care and education of certain of his relatives.

Round Up the Co-defendants.

While Capone was pondering what to do when he appears before Judge Wilkerson tomorrow, government agents and the city police had begun the task of rounding up his 68 co-defendants in the beer conspiracy case on bench warrants issued from the federal court.

Acting Police Commissioner Alcock has assigned a number of policemen to work with government operatives in arresting all the men named in the indictment with Capone. Alcock's detectives will participate in the questioning of every one arrested and will be ready to follow up confessions that might lead to the solutions of many murders, such as the Valentine day massacre, the machine gunning of Joe Aiello, and the slaying of Scalisi, Anselmi, and their fellow murderer, Joe Giunta.

Assistant State's Attorney Charles J. Mueller, in charge of the special grand jury investigation of the police department, said he will be on hand, too, ready to take proper action if any evidence is obtained of bribes paid to policemen or other officials.

FIND 2 MORE BODIES FROM YACHT WHICH SANK WITH 8 ABOARD

Rye, N. Y., June 14.—(AP)—Two bodies washed ashore in Long Island sound were identified tonight as Lillian Kempt, 37, an actress, and Robert Johnston, an entertainer, members of a yachting party of eight lost with the auxiliary sloop Sea Fox on May 22.

The actress was identified by her father and her husband, and Johnston by Kenneth Stewart, a New York reporter.

That left only three missing in the Sea Fox tragedy, the cause of which has never been explained. The 35 foot craft is supposed to have been blown up during a storm after it left City island for a week-end cruise.

Identify Girl Amnesia Victim Found on Road

An 18 year old girl, a victim of amnesia, who was found wandering on a road south of Joliet Saturday, was identified in a Joliet hospital yesterday morning as Ruth Uebelein by her father, Philip Uebelein, 5942 South Troy street. The father said his daughter left home Saturday afternoon to shop and did not return. The daughter did not recognize her father. She is under treatment.

Capone Allies See His Finish and Dispute for Gang Throne

Capone gang captains, convinced that the government's double indictment of Al Capone, their chief, will mean his undoing, are already disputing among themselves over the succession.

This intelligence was gleaned by the special prohibition agents, who, by tapping telephone wires and using other methods, perfected the conspiracy case against Capone and the 68 other gangsters in his $20,000,000 a year beer syndicate.

In disputing among themselves, federal agents say, the gang captains have eliminated as possible successors to Capone all those who have been hit by federal convictions or charges. This means, say the special agents, that names little known are due to loom up as the result of the gang's reorganization.

Four Heirs Presumptive.

Four gangsters were mentioned by the federal men as heirs presumptive. They are Llewellyn Humphries, Rocco De Grasse, Frank Rio and Teddy Newberry.

Humphries is said to be in full charge of all the hard liquor business on the south side of Chicago. The agents say they learned something of his importance in the gang by listening to his voice over the tapped wires, when he gave his commands to lieutenants.

De Grasse is called the "Little Capone" of Melrose Park, where he has "the works"—alky, whisky, beer, vice and gambling. He enjoys the same authority in Melrose Park that Ralph Capone has always been accorded in Cicero, according to the special agents.

Newberry Rules on North Side.

Newberry, former lieutenant of the Aiellos, Jack Zuta and Bugs Moran on the north side, has become a "big shot" since the taking over of that gang by the Capone forces, say the agents. When the merger went through Newberry was placed in charge as Capone's proconsul for the north side.

Rio is Capone's bodyguard and executive secretary. He served a jail term with his master in Philadelphia two years ago.

Rio would be the successor to Capone if traditon were to determine the choice. Hitherto in Chicago gangland the bodyguard of the ruler has succeeded to the throne. Big Jim Colosimo was succeeded by his bodyguard, Johnny Torrio. Capone became bodyguard to Johnny Torrio and succeeded him.

Rivals Think Rio Too Soft.

But, say the dry agents, Rio's rivals declare he has not had sufficient executive experience to take over the gang. They complain that while they have been out in the field making the beer, booze, alky, vice and gambling business hum, Rio has been traveling around with Capone living a life of luxury. They think he is too soft.

There are also objections to Newberry. As a former member of the north side gang, the Capone followers would never place enough trust in him to make him their leader, the agents say. Moreover, all alky cookers—the body politic of the Capone gang—are Sicilians, and Newberry is not even an Italian.

The old gang captains, Guzik, Ralph Capone, Mops Volpe, Machine Gun Jack McGurn and Joe Fusco—apparently are out of the picture, for they are under conviction or charges of federal law violations, and a gang chief must be immune to keep his command.

The federal authorities do not believe that the Capone gang will ever again be as powerful as it has been in the past, with complete control over a syndicate taking in an estimated $100,000,000 a year or more.

They are confident that Capone himself, under sentence of six months for contempt of federal court and under indictments on beer and income tax charges, is at the end of the rope.

But the agents declare that so long as prohibition endures, there will be alky cooking, wort brewing and whisky cutting, and that this will be done by the remnants of the Capone mob.

Row Over Who Is "Best Man" Ends in Slaying

Anthony Filus, 56 years old, 1036 North Paulina street, and John Dzudzik, 30 years old, whose address was not learned by the police, quarreled last night in the candy store of Mrs. Mary Drozdz at 1069 North Paulina street over which was the "best man." Filus ended the dispute by striking Dzudzik over the head with a heavy pitcher and killed him. Mrs. Drozdz spent several hours in getting a physician who, on his arrival, reported the slaying to the police.

Negroes Tie Up South Bend Cashier and Steal $4,000

South Bend, Ind., June 15.—[Special.]—Two armed Negroes bound and gagged Charles Mergenthaler, 48 years old, cashier of the Northern Indiana Railway, Inc., early this morning, rifled two safes and escaped with approximately $4,000 in cash. The Negroes enterede the office by crawling through a small opening from an alley. After the bandits left, Mergenthaler hopped to the front door and summoned help.

Two Flyers Killed in 3,000 Foot Nose Dive of Plane

ST. JOHN, N. B., June 14.—(AP)—John Sterling, pilot, and his mechanic, Rud Brayley, were killed tonight as their plane went into a nosedive at a height of 3,000 feet and crashed on rocks in the Kennebecasis river near the St. John airport.

IDENTIFY SECOND SLAIN VICTIM IN STREET SHOOTING

The police yesterday identified the body of the second victim slain early in the day in a shooting affray at 59th and State streets as that of Edward Kurtz, 35 years old, whose last known address was given the police as 5228 South Wells street. The other man killed was Peter Glacken, 40 years old, 5849 Wentworth avenue. Both had police records.

Henry Haggard, 6217 South State street, and Miles Brown, 5858 South State street, who was discharged from the police force for drunkenness a month ago, were being held last night as a result of the shooting. Both are colored. Witnesses said Haggard picked a fight with four white men, including Kurtz and Glacken, and that Kurtz drew his pistol, firing several times at Haggard, but only wounding him, while one bullet from his gun accidentally killed Glacken. Kurtz then ran away and refused to heed the commands to halt shouted by Policeman James Morrissey who fired, killing him.

ARREST NEAR IN $50,000 ROBBERY OF CARTOONIST

Sidney Smith's Chauffeur Scans Photographs.

a prospect in the robbery of Sidney Smith, nationally famous cartoonist, who, with his wife, Kathryn, was held up and robbed of $50,000 in jewelry early yesterday in a park [illegible] Chief Norton made the announcement after Mr. Smith's chauffeur, Clarin Cannon, 5240 South Park way, had spent nearly three hours at the detective bureau scanning photographs of jewel thieves. The chauffeur caught a good view of the short, stout, middle aged gunman who directed the robbery.

Tells of Identification.

"The chauffeur positively identified the bandit's picture," said Chief Norton. "I won't give out his name until I've had a talk with Mr. Smith. We have detectives on the suspect's trail, however, and I hope to have him in custody shortly."

A less optimistic account of the police progress in the case came from the policemen who showed the chauffeur the photographs. They asserted Cannon had selected four pictures from among the thousands spread before him, with the observation that one of four answered the general description of the chief robber.

Mr. Smith, cartoonist for THE TRIBUNE and creator of the comic character, Andy Gump, accepted the experience in a whimsical spirit. To mark the occasion he held a house party yesterday in his town residence, the peninsula apartments on the lake at Argyle street. The jewels, he explained, were insured.

Injured Hand Deters Him.

"My principal regret," the cartoonist said, "is that I didn't take the opportunity to smash those fellows on the jaw. I cut my right hand recently while fishing and it was still pretty tender under the bandages."

As it was, the cartoonist risked a relief in the head by raising his cane to disarm one of the robbers. At a threat from the other to shoot he desisted.

The robbers boarded the Smith car when it stopped for a traffic light at Pearson street. The stocky, middle aged gunman jumped in beside the chauffeur, and his accomplice, who was younger and more slender, jumped in beside Mrs. Smith. The second man, whose face was masked by a handkerchief, trembled with nervousness.

Bandits Wear Tuxedoes.

Both wore tuxedoes. Mr. Smith and his wife had attended a ball at the South Shore Country club, and it is believed the bandits trailed the Smith car north. Once in the machine, the robbers ordered the chauffeur to turn east in Pearson street.

At a spot within hailing distance of Michigan avenue traffic they executed the robbery, turned off the ignition of the Smith car and tossed the key on a nearby lawn. Another car came along containing one or two men and the robbers clambered in and escaped.

DECIDES TO BECOME BLOND

Hollywood, Cal., June 14.—[Special.]—On her departure for S. Rex Bell's Nevada ranch to become "a cattle queen instead of a movie queen," as she phrased it, Clara Bow today revealed herself as a platinum blond. Gone are the vividly red tresses in favor of a very pale, silvery mop of hair.

It was all done a week ago, Clara explained, to avoid the crowds of curious as she made certain necessary rounds of Hollywood before retiring from screen life.

"The trick went over great," she said. "Very few recognized me as a blond."

Pressed about her personal affairs, Clara declared Rex Bell was her favored man, but she does not contemplate matrimony until she reaches the age of 26, more than a year hence.

"Certainly I am never going to announce any engagement again," she said, "because of all the wise cracks whenever there is such an announcement."

While on the ranch, with Bell's 1,200 head of cattle, Clara said she will start work on "the real story of my life." There will be no ghost writing about it, for she intends to pen every line herself. No arrangements have yet been made for the publication of this autobiography.

Kills Self After Seeing Roommate's Graduation

Alton Howe, 26 years old, shot and killed himself with a revolver in the basement of his home at 1117 North Dearborn street Saturday night after attending graduating ceremonies of the Illinois College of Chiropody and Foot Surgery. His roommate, Robert Harrison, was graduated from the school which Howe had left after attending classes for a year. On their return home Howe expressed regret at having left the school and went to the basement.

Farmer, 70, Kills His Wife and Then Ends Own Life

Bloomington, Ill., June 14.—[Special.]—Neighbors early today found James Smith and his wife slain in their home in Stanford, evidently a case of murder and suicide. The husband, a retired farmer, 70, left a note stating that he was in ill health and, not caring to live longer, decided to take his wife with him to the other world. The coroner expressed the belief that the wife was killed after the couple had retired last night by her husband, who then turned the gun on himself.

"NO PUSSY-FOOTING HERE!"

We're back to pre-war prices!

"Owing to recent reductions in the wool and woolen markets, we are convinced that we can replace our present stocks for much less than we paid for them, and there isn't a clothing store in the United States that cannot do the same thing. Other clothiers may continue their 'pussyfooting' methods relative to the lowering of clothing prices to the level justified by replacement values as long as they like. We're red-blooded enough to take the initiative in this great sacrifice-entailing readjustment movement, because we feel it to be our patriotic duty as well as good business judgment to do so."

THE ABOVE

The men's clothing situation today is in many respects like the clothing situation of 1920, which followed on the heels of the orgy of high war-time prices. At that time, Benson & Rixon tore away the sham and camouflage which kept clothing prices at their peak. They became the public's champion of a fair post-war price-readjustment.

Today, Benson & Rixon lead the clothing world again! They foresaw the revolutionary changes about to take place in 1931 clothing standards . . . and, instead of pussyfooting and hedging, they sacrificed every garment made under old standards before their beautiful new loop store opened . . . just one month ago! Others, who hesitated or delayed taking their loss on old-standard merchandise, will not have their old stocks "unloaded" for fully another year!

Benson & Rixon have no "old stocks." Every garment in all Benson & Rixon stores is made to New Era standards and to New Era low prices! The fabrics are different . . . soft loosely-woven materials are out . . . and now hard-finished pure worsted fabrics are in . . . fabrics that resist wear and hold their press.

The linings and trimmings, too, have changed . . . alpaca, rayon, silk and satin have given way to science's amazing new creation, Celanese . . . uniquely luxurious and with wearing qualities so marvelous it's guaranteed for the life of the suit! And, in addition to these modern improvements, all Benson & Rixon suits . . . at every price-range, even the lowest . . . are hand-tailored and include two pair of pants!

Benson & Rixon's courageous, clean-cut policies . . . their leadership . . . are your protection. You take no chances of receiving garments made to old standards in a Benson & Rixon store today . . . because Benson & Rixon simply don't carry anything but suits of the New Era, with all of the great features this day will be famous for in clothing history!

Chicago observed flag day yesterday with parades, programs, and exercises typical of those held all over the nation in commemoration of the 154th anniversary of the birthday of the national emblem. The Stars and Stripes were officially adopted as the American flag by the continental congress on June 14, 1777.

JUDGE BURKE.

Throughout the the city flags flew from public buildings and homes. Many churches observed the day with patriotic services. The story of the flag was retold at more than 700 programs sponsored by the American Legion in Chicago and other parts of Illinois, according to Dr. E. J. Cigrand of Batavia, president of the National Flag Day association.

Lincoln Park Ceremony.

The principal outdoor observance was held in Lincoln park under the auspices of Chicago lodge, No. 4, of Elks, with State's Attorney Swanson and Judge Joseph Burke as speakers. A crowd of 2,000 heard the tributes to the flag and watched a series of colorful ceremonies staged by the lodge which is credited with being the originator of Flag day observance. Nine Legion posts participated in a parade preceding the program.

Recounting the history of the flag, State's Attorney Swanson pointed out that it is the third oldest of the national standards of the world, older than the Union Jack of Great Britain or the Tri-Color of France. It is, he said, a flag of war, of peace, of the soldier, and of "just plain folk." He lauded it as "a beacon of enduring hope for the future to the oppressed of all lands."

Combat Medal Men Take Part.

A dozen wearers of the Congressional Medal of Honor and the Distinguished Service Cross carried flags symbolizing the development of the present flag in an exercise conducted by Judge Burke. The acts of valor performed by each were related by John R. McCabe, exalted ruler of the lodge and chairman of the meeting. Lewis Nettelhorst, secretary of the lodge committee, had general charge of the program.

Another event of the afternoon was the twenty-fifth annual Socialist party picnic at Riverview park, attended by several thousand Socialists, members of their families and friends. William Svoboda, Socialist mayor of Racine, and Oscar Ameringer of Oklahoma City, editor of the American Guardian, were speakers.

Delegations from the Daughters of Union Veterans, the Daughters of the American Revolution, and the Women's Relief corps took part in a program last night at the New England Congregational church, 869 North Dearborn street. Col. George A. Wildrick, staff officer of the Sixth corps area headquarters, spoke.

Peoria, Ill., June 14.—[Special.]—Secretary of War Patrick J. Hurley, in addition to his official position, is one of the most prominent waterway proponents in the United States, will be Peoria's guest tomorrow when he arrives from Washington to deliver the principal address at the dedication of the municipal river and rail terminal. With the war department chief, Maj. Gen. T. Q. Ashburn, executive head of the Inland Waterways corporation, will speak on the program arranged to celebrate this city's progress in the development of waterway projects, and the inauguration of barge line service between Peoria and New Orleans.

PATRICK J. HURLEY. [H. & E.]

Mayor Homer L. Ahrends will be general chairman of the huge celebration. The distinguished guests will be introduced by Congressman William E. Hull, champion of the Illinois waterway and other river and harbor improvements throughout the country; Senator James Hamilton Lewis, Lieut. Gov. Fred Sterling, Charles S. Deneen, Cleveland A. Newton, John H. Walker, Clifford V. Gregory, and others will make brief addresses.

Secretary Hurley will receive the salute of his escort, the 2d battalion, 130th infantry, Illinois National Guard, at the city hall where a parade is scheduled to start at 11:45 o'clock. He will inspect the unit before the parade forms. Naval reserves will fire a salute to the secretary of war as he enters the grounds of the terminal and a salute to Maj. Gen. Ashburn when his fleet of barges approaches the dock.

QUIZ IS STARTED TO LEARN WHO O. K.'D TAG DAY

Flowers Sold Despite City Ordinance.

Ald. Sheldon W. Govier [9th], chairman of the tag day subcommittee of the city council finance committee, declared last night that he will start an immediate inquiry to find out by whose authority carnations were sold on the streets yesterday in apparent violation of the city's tag day ordinance.

ALD. GOVIER.

"I'm either going to see that the ordinance is enforced in the future or resign as chairman of the subcommittee," Govier said. "I certainly don't expect to be made the goat in this affair."

Five Organizations Sell.

Five Jewish organizations participated in the carnation selling to raise money for the Jewish national fund to purchase land in Palestine. The organizations were the Chicago Junior Hadassah, Senior Hadassah, Volunteers of Zion, Junior Mizeachi, Young Israel, and Avukah. Mrs. Eli Baron headed the committee in charge of the tag day.

Under the city ordinance, which was adopted after years of effort by Ald Govier and others to protect the public against the nuisance of frequent tag selling campaigns, tag days are restricted to four a year. The organizations authorized to stage them are the Poppy Day association, Chicago Children's Benefit league, Chicago Federation of Aged and Adult charities, and Chicago Federated charities. Special council permits must be obtained for any other tag days. According to Ald. Govier the groups selling carnations yesterday obtained no council permit.

Police Do Not Interfere.

Under orders of Acting Commissioner Alcock the police did not interfere with the taggers.

"If the police commissioner allowed a city ordinance to be violated it would seem obvious who is responsible," said Ald. Govier. "The city council makes the laws, but it isn't responsible for their enforcement.

"If one organization can get away with an unauthorized tag day all the rest of them can do the same and the ordinance isn't worth a straw. I am absolutely opposed to letting down the bars so that every little money raising organization can plague the public again. Therefore, I am going to get to the bottom of yesterday's tag day or quit."

REPORT CHICAGOAN MISSING.

Chief of Police Thomas Griffiths of South Haven, Mich., is conducting an investigation of the disappearance from a hotel there of a man who had registered as M. E. Horton of Chicago.

CROWD BEACHES IN ADVANCE OF FORMAL OPENING

June sunshine brought thousands of Chicagoans to the beaches yesterday in advance of official openings. The majority of the bathers braved the chilly water but once and returned to bask in the sun to acquire tan. Others shivered in the brisk breeze from the lake. Beaches along the north shore and in Indiana also drew many visitors. The beaches are to open during the week and on next Sunday.

Ideal weather for motoring brought many Sunday afternoon tourists to county roads. County highway police reported the heaviest traffic of the season.

POLICE SUPPRESS SECOND PAPER IN GAG LAW FIGHT

Vice and Graft Charged by Editor.

Minneapolis, Minn., June 14.—[Special.]—Six on the Supreme court decision in the Minnesota press suppression law is barely dry and a new era of newspaper suppression has begun in Minneapolis.

The Public Press, successor to The Saturday Press, which was closed under the gag law statutes, is the latest victim of suppression action. The paper has been closed, not under a "gag" law, but simply by a police order. The supreme court recently held the "gag" law unconstitutional.

Editor Denied Relief.

The editor, Arthur Kasherman, has been denied a court order to restrain police from confiscating his paper, as they have already done in two instances when it appeared on the street. Answers filed by officials to his appeal for a restraining order state plainly that they consider the paper scandalous. A trial on the case will not open until next fall. And there the matter rests.

The Public Press in its news columns appears similar to The Saturday Press, dealing mainly with an alleged expose of vice conditions and graft in Minneapolis.

The actual situation behind the suppression of The Public Press is not clear. Neither was the situation clear at the time The Saturday Press was ordered closed. But after the latter paper, edited by J. M. Near and Howard Guilford, had been suppressed, making corruption, as charged in its columns, was discovered among public officials of Minneapolis.

The edition of The Public Press which was confiscated by the police carried serious charges against Mayor William F. Kunze and his administration. The papers were seized two days previous to the primary election of May 11, in which Kunze was a candidate for reelection. Kunze and Kashman, who was also a candidate for mayor, were both defeated.

The story which covered page one of the confiscated edition alleged that the administration had been "protecting" a gambling house which was raided about a month previously, and that a part of the "split" on the profits from the gaming tables had gone into the mayor's campaign fund.

Police Deny Holdup.

At the time this gambling place was held up, the bandits getting an amount variously estimated from $3,000 to $15,000, police denied both that there had been a holdup and that a gambling place had existed at the reported address, 23 Hennepin avenue. Newspapers of the city after several days' search found men who vouched for the holdup and told of having been among the victims.

In addition to this story, the newspaper carried other stories alleging that "protection" money was being collected from speakeasies, a slot machine ring, and from houses of ill fame.

Some of these charges were substantiated by the April-May grand jury with arrests and convictions of citizen picked out at random on the streets can name the location of a speakeasy or a vice resort of some form. Grand juries have repeatedly attempted to make investigations of Minneapolis vice but have met with reversals at every turn.

Attack Gen. Leach.

When the Saturday Press was "gagged" in the fall of 1927 it had opened fire on the then mayor, Gen. George E. Leach, and his chief of police, Frank W. Brunskill. It was charged that Leach and Brunskill were getting part of the money being paid to protect vice. Brunskill was said to be receiving the money and dividing it with Leach.

A lengthy grand jury inquiry was made into charges against Brunskill, during which time Howard Guilford, one of the editors of the Saturday Press, appeared as a witness. Brunskill, however, was not indicted.

In 1929, during the inquiry into Minneapolis aldermanic graft, some interesting sidelights on vice in the city were brought out.

During the trial of James F. Duffy, third ward politician, charged with extortion, "Red" Golden, a gambling house operator, testified to being called by a man named "McCormick," believed to be Frank McCormick, Leach campaign manager, and told to close his place. Later, he said on the stand, he received another phone call from "McCormick" and was told he could open up again.

Fred J. Maurer, former third ward alderman, in prison on a graft sentence, was brought from Stillwater, and followed Golden on the stand. He testified that he had two conversations with Duffy in regard to Golden's gambling place at 1301 Washington avenue north. At one of these conferences, Maurer testified, E. J. Sweeney, also convicted previously on a graft charge, had been present and indicated that it might be worth $75 a week to let Golden's place run. Duffy was reported to have said that he could get the money "if we keep our mouths shut." Mauer testified that money was paid for a period of ten or twelve weeks.

Duffy was convicted and the testimony stands on the court books.

Editor Is Shot.

Two years previous to this Howard Guilford had been shot down by bullets fired into his automobile by gunmen who overtook him as he was coming from his home in Robbinsdale to Minneapolis. An aroused city sent police in a frantic search for the men who had wounded the editor of the Saturday Press.

Guilford and Near a week previously had hurled charges at commercialized gambling in Minneapolis. Guilford said from his hospital bed that these charges had aroused the enmity of persons who profited from the games to the point where they had threatened before the shooting to "bump him off."

He said that he had refused to accept a "weekly pay envelope from the gambling syndicate" and that their threats had followed.

Daily Paper in Fight.

The Minneapolis Tribune at the time said editorially:

"A grave challenge has been tossed at every agency having to do with the maintainance of law and order in Minneapolis.

"Gunmen from the ambush of a curtained car shot at and wounded an editor of a weekly publication who had declared to make an expose of 'conditions as they are in this city.'

"The expose was to be directed particularly against alleged gambling which, the editors of the weekly say, was being carried on with little or no molestation. It had come to the ears of the wounded man, he said, that he would be bumped off if he carried out his avowed plan. The weekly, published Saturday, dared the unnamed challengers to do their worst. The shooting followed within two days. The victim charged the shooting to members or hired agents of an underworld gambling ring. . . .

"Minneapolis looks to its guardians to do their utmost to get at the bottom of this shooting and find what is behind it and what it signifies in terms of sovereignty and dignity in this municipality."

A tip was brought to Sheriff Earle Brown a day later that there was a gang in the city whose members were said to have boasted they would kill any one for $500. Brown and his deputies in a ten hour hunt rounded up this gang and Guildford identified two of them as men who had been in the gunmen's car.

Four months later the two men, both from Minneapolis, were absolved by Guilford, and charges were drawn against Jack Gold, Chicago gunman, and Phillip [Flippy] Share. These charges were never pressed. Mose Barnett left Minneapolis at this time and has not returned.

A year later, with a new grand jury investigating charges of misconduct against Chief of Police Brunskill, Arthur Kasherman, law student at the University of Wisconsin and investigator for attorneys, was called into the grand jury rooms.

Refuses to Testify.

He was asked to testify regarding a report that he had seen Mose Barnett pass a large roll of bills to Brunskill. Kasherman refused to testify, and when the grand jury recovered from its astonishment he was cited for contempt.

The question put to him by Judge W. W. Bardwell at the contempt hearing revealed the question. Bardwell read:

"You appeared as a witness before the grand jury and were asked this question: 'Did you ever tell any one that on a night in February, 1925, you were passing the office of Frank W. Brunskill, chief of police, and that Mose Barnett had a huge roll of bills, which he gave to the chief of police?' Did you refuse to answer that question?"

Kasherman continued in his refusal to testify and was found guilty of contempt. He was sent to the county jail for 30 days.

When his term ended he was again summoned before the brand jury and the same question asked. He again refused to testify and in a court hearing received a 90 day term for contempt, a second conviction for the same offense and unusual in the annals of law.

Kasherman fought this second sentence through the lower courts and state Supreme court, the sentence being upheld in each case. He finally carried it to the United States Supreme court, which refused to pass on the case. When his plea was refused he served the term.

After his release from the 90 day term he lacked funds to return to law school and started the Public Press as a means of earning sufficient money to enable him to continue his studies.

Printing Plant Entered.

But he had a hard road to travel. Shortly after he started publication, assailing his contempt sentences in the first edition, the printing plant was entered at night and the type of an edition, which was then in the forms, strewn over the floor. A linotype was broken. Police were unable to trace the vandals.

A short while afterwards Kasherman was slugged over the head with an iron pipe only a few blocks from the city hall. He charged that vice purveyors whom he had assailed in his paper were responsible, but no arrests followed.

A few editions came off the press without incident. On May 9 police seized nearly an entire edition and warned him to cease publication.

BECOMES SHERIFF

MRS. ALCINDA E. TURNER.

Palmyra, Mo., June 14.—Alcinda E. Turner, widow of the late Sheriff A. E. Turner, became sheriff of Marion county, Missouri, Saturday, the oath of office being administered by County Clerk M. K. Byrum. Mrs. Turner is the first woman sheriff Marion county has ever had and was appointed by the Marion County court to serve in her late husband's office until the election and qualification of a new sheriff at a special election to be held on Tuesday, July 7. Mrs. Turner has announced that she will be a candidate for the remaining one and and a half year of her husband's term which would terminate on Dec. 31, 1932.

Mrs. Turner has appointed three deputies—J. Will Mefford, D. G. Lefever and J. W. Christian, all of whom have accepted and qualified. The three men were deputies under her husband.

nearly a score women found in houses near the loop. Dry agents joined with police in making raids and nearly a hundred persons were arrested. All denied in their testimony before the jury that "protection" had been bought from the police.

Subsequently, the grand jury indicted a number of Minneapolis policemen, including E. J. Gustafson, head of the police morals squad. All charges made against them, however, were dropped when they appeared in court.

Name Chief "Collector."

Reports circulated about the city, which have never been proved or disproved, charge that Harold Brevick, formerly secretary to Mayor Kunze, was chief of the collection racket. Brevick resigned when Kunze was defeated and his present whereabouts are not known, although it is reported that he has gone to Winnipeg.

A canvass of the underworld characters brings to light charges that nearly 3,000 vice resorts of various kinds exist in Minneapolis. These include houses of prostitution, speakeasies, and gambling dives. There are also said to be more than 600 slot machines ringing up the dollars for a group of men close to the police and the present administration.

Most of these charges are not generally known, although nearly any

400 'JOBLESS' REACH CAPITAL FOR RELIEF PLEA

Hear Speaker in Park; Go to Legislature Today.

BY PERCY WOOD.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., June 14.—[Special.]—Jobless men—400 strong—from a dozen Illinois towns struggled into Springfield by truck and on foot today to participate tomorrow in an appeal to the legislature for some sort of relief, preferably unemployment insurance to date.

The unemployed paraded the downtown streets this afternoon wearing paper shoulder sashes on which was printed "Illinois Hunger March" and carried banners proclaiming, "We Want Work, Not Charity." They are organized under the leadership of the state commission, Unemployed Councils of Illinois, but the literature sold during speeches at Reservoir park bore the stamp of the American Communist party. There was also mention of the progress of the soviet union.

The marchers came from Chicago, Moline, Rock Island, Rockford, West Frankfort, East St. Louis, Belleville, Galesburg, Spring Valley, and other communities within a day's reach of Springfield. Each delegation appeared to have a leader, but the principal speechmaker was Nils Kjar, Springfield representative of the unemployed councils.

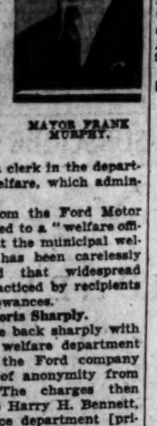
Kjar, a fiery talker, drew a verbal picture of prosperity and worker equality as his conception of soviet Russia to the crowd in the park. He urged them to "demand immediate relief for the unemployed workers and poverty stricken farmers. Allow no discrimination against Negroes in furnishing relief. Demand passage of the workers' social insurance bill, paying $15 a week to every worker unemployed or unable to work because of sickness, accident, or old age. These funds can be raised by 10 per cent taxes on all corporation profits and by special graduated taxes on all incomes of $5,000 a year and all property valued at more than $25,000."

There were other speakers with like appeals.

The crowd formed in a ragged line later and marched downtown to shout "union is strength" at the principal street corners. In front of their meeting hall they congregated, in the street, halting traffic, and were dispersed by Springfield and state police. They repaired then to the meeting room above, to elect those members who shall speak to the assembly tomorrow afternoon during the twenty minutes granted by Speaker Shanahan of the house.

Mayor of Detroit Clashes with Ford Over Aid to Needy

Detroit, Mich., June 14.—(AP)—Frank Murphy, red haired young mayor of the fourth city, and the Ford Motor company, in normal times largest employer of labor in the metropolitan area, are at loggerheads over Detroit's $1,000,000 a month unemployment dole.



MAYOR FRANK MURPHY.

The antagonism, long ago evident in statements of the mayor regarding industries which pay no city taxes, came into the open after the discovery last week of a spectacular fraud by a clerk in the department of public welfare, which administers the dole.

A statement from the Ford Motor company, attributed to a "welfare official," charged that the municipal welfare department has been carelessly administered and that widespread fraud is being practiced by recipients of the weekly allowances.

Mayor Retorts Sharply.

The mayor came back sharply with a defense of the welfare department and called upon the Ford company to lift the cloak of anonymity from the statement. The charges then were attributed to Harry H. Bennett, chief of the service department [private police] of the Ford company. The mayor then called together the 600 employes of the welfare department and, in a speech before them, challenged Henry or Edsel Ford or the Ford Motor company to substantiate the charges.

Bennett had said that of 3,960 persons listed on the welfare rolls as former Ford employes, one-third never worked there; others were discharged for cause, and that some actually drew dole money while still at work at the factory. He also asserted that the Ford company itself had furnished relief to its former employes found to be in need. This was in answer to Murphy's earlier charge that industries like the Ford company, which are outside the corporate limits of Detroit, threw their unemployed former workers on the Detroit taxpayers for support.

Asks for Specific Facts.

Murphy retaliated with a demand for the names of those Bennett had said were receiving aid fraudulently and asserted that during this week the police will check the 32,000 families now on the welfare rolls.

The mayor compared conditions in Detroit, due to unemployment with a "war emergency," and warmly defended the distribution of help to families of the unemployed.

The "dole" is no new thing in Detroit. For approximately 30 years the municipality has furnished food orders and arranged for shelter for destitute families, normally numbering about 2,500. Last winter, however, the number on the rolls approached 50,000. The average cost for the last two years has been about $1,000,000 a month.

This unprecedented volume of demand admittedly introduced confusion into the welfare department. Small frauds were brought to light from time to time, to be climaxed with the astounding $207,000 embezzlement of Alex F. Lewis, $130 a month cleark.

TRICKS BURGLAR IN HOME; HOLDS HIM FOR POLICE

Henry Wosowsky and his wife, Jennie, were in the sitting room of their home at 1123 North Campbell avenue yesterday afternoon when a strange youth walked in. He had come through the dining room and Mr. Wosowsky correctly reckoned that he had climbed in through a window.

He was somewhat astonished when the youth bowed politely and asked if Minnie was at home—Minnie Berger. While Mr. Wosowsky was busy explaining to him that Minnie didn't live there, Mrs. Wosowsky discovered that the $140 watch she had left in the dining room was missing. Whereupon the youth dashed to a hallway, where neighbors of the Wosowskys captured him.

Mr. Wosowsky then told the youth that if he would tell where the watch was he should be freed. The burglar admitted it was on the steps and Mrs. Wosowsky recovered it. Then Mr. Wosowsky locked the door and ordered his wife to call the police.

The burglar tried to fight his way out, but the Wosowskys held him until a police squad arrived. He gave the name of Henry Sussman, 19 years old, 919 North Washtenaw avenue.

Take Bottle to Cheer Up Hospital Patient; He Dies

Arthur Hill, colored, 45 years old, had been a patient at the Oak Forest infirmary for several months. Yesterday a delegation of his friends went to visit him. In order to cheer him up they took along a pint of whisky. Hill drank it and seemed to be cheered. A few hours later he died and the coroner's office is investigating to determine whether the liquor was poisoned.

'PRISCILLA ALDEN' UNVEILS TABLETS AT D. A. R. GRAVES

Coldwater, Mich., June 14.—[Special.]—The great-great-great-granddaughter of John and Priscilla Alden, said to have been the first of the Mayflower passengers to set foot on Plymouth Rock, and who inspired Longfellow's poem, "The Courtship of Miles Standish," Priscilla Alden Haynes, Girard township, unveiled bronze tablets at the graves of two revolutionary soldiers' daughters today.

The ceremony, sponsored by the Coldwater chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution, was attended by state officers. The tablets unveiled were to Abigail Thompson Haynes, founder of the Baptist church here, and her sister, Mrs. Lucie Thompson Lockwood.

The Rev. J. H. Vatcher, First Baptist church here, gave an address on "The Connection of the Pioneer Haynes Family."

Gerard Asks Nation-Wide Conference.

New York, June 14.—[Special.]—The first definite move for the setting up of a ten year plan for American industry with the object of systematizing production, eliminating unemployment and integrating the industrial and economic structure of the nation was taken today by the national civic federation in a letter to leaders of American industry and organized labor. The letters urged the calling of a national congress to discuss and formulate a program of industrial readjustment and create permanent machinery for this purpose.

JAMES W. GERARD.

The letter of the national civic federation, of which Elihu Root is honorary president, was sent out under the signature of James W. Gerard, former ambassador and chairman of the federation's commission on industrial inquiry, and was based upon a proposal addressed to him by Matthew Woll, acting president of the federation and vice president of the American Federation of Labor.

Conclave of Delegates.

Mr. Gerard's letter was addressed to 40 leading manufacturers in the country, officials of the American Federation of Labor and heads of all international unions. The letter declares that Mr. Woll's proposal for a great congress of industry has received the indorsement of the national civic federation and expressed the readiness of the federation to summon such a congress "if it can have reasonable assurance that the response will be such as to make success probable. Manufacturers and labor leaders were asked to state their opinion and that of their organizations on the proposal and to advise whether they would participate in a preliminary meeting that might be held before the formal calling of the congress.

"What is desired is to draw together a great conclave of delegates, not a mere collection of individuals without representative character, "Mr. Gerard's letter declared.

It is hoped that given a sympathetic response the preliminary meeting may be held early in the fall.

Promote Social Safety.

As outlined by Mr. Woll in a letter to Mr. Gerard the proposal for a five or ten year plan for American industry has for its object "the creation of working machinery to promote social safety and economic stability." Copies of Mr. Woll's letter were enclosed in the communication addressed by Mr. Gerard to manufacturers and labor leaders urging the convocation of an industrial congress.

The proposed congress of industry, Mr. Woll wrote to Mr. Gerard, "is to be composed of representatives of all forms and character of industrial organizations already in existence, to ascertain and evaluate all essential economic and industrial factors, to estimate our probable and normal industrial and commercial growth, say for the next ten years, to determine as far as human knowledge and foresight permit the tendency of new fields of industrial activity and changes within our present scheme of things, thereafter to seek coördination for the promotion of industrial balance and to begin that march toward permanence of machinery without which we cannot infuse into industry that democratic urge and authority vital to its life as a field of human endeavor and vital to its salvation from an onslaught of state political control that cannot be avoided in the absence of self-control."

Here's Letter from Woll.

In his letter Mr. Woll also wrote:

"The great depression now upon us has forced us to the conclusion that the time for action has arrived. It appears to me that bold measures are required, but mere boldness is not enough. We must have bold measures that are bold because they strike hard against what is wrong and promise sweeping elimination of maladjustment.

"We must proceed with great safety upon the assumption that if lack of industrial balance continues we shall continue in our failure to feed our people, we shall continue in our failure to use our industrial capacity, we shall continue to have on one hand enormous wealth and on the other hand great value of want. This nation cannot in safety continue that way.

"The time has arrived for the conscious, organized development of cooperation in all industry, for the development of fundamentally democratic processes by which industry can bring about that balance which is essential to the welfare and perhaps to the safety of the nation."

Lack of Equilibrium.

Discussing the lack of coördination in American industry and the consequent lack of equilibrium between production, distribution and consumption, Mr. Wohl added:

"Our position is much as if we had forty-eight states but no union of states—as if we had hundreds of communities but no bond of government between them. We have in industry about the same chaos and misunderstanding and misapplication of energy that we should have in our political life if our various local community organizations were not brought together in an harmonious whole by a national system of government or of working harness, developed out of practice and accepted by common consent.

"I propose, therefore, that the time has arrived to begin the effort to create for the communities and the states and the sections of industry what our forefathers did when they wove a nation around the scattered, yet related, communities of our continent.

"I see no sufficient gain to be derived out of anything less than a tremendous effort. I see no sufficient good to be gained through creeping with undue caution, the trials of our time do not permit long waiting.

Meet Communist Plan.

"We need, for example, to meet the cold-blooded communist five year plan with a warm blooded ten year plan of democratic idealism woven into the very pattern of our national fabric. We need to move with giant strides to put six million Americans to work, to start our machinery, to take out of our national economy the awful loss and pain of too much or too little. We need to take steps that will take as much account of the shameful fact that our average industrial wage is but a pittance of $1,308 a year as we take of our million dollar reserves and our brilliantly executed skyscrapers."

Asserting that the age of extreme and selfish individualism must be regarded as over and that only by coöperation of all factors concerned can modern industrial society be maintained, Mr. Woll in a supplementary statement today declared that the primary aim of a ten year plan for American industry as proposed by him must include a program for balancing the factors of human commodity needs, human labor supply, mechanical equipment, and national credit.

For Human Requirements.

The initial task as envisaged by Mr. Woll will involve the following:

"To determine the annual national human requirements in commodities and service for a period of ten years.

"To determine the immediate visible supply of required commodities.

"To apportion among the industrial divisions their respective tasks of production and handling.

To determine the available labor hours in human terms, on the initial basis of the six hour day and the five day week.

"To determine and apportion the required labor hours for the production and handling of commodities, to the point of consumption.

"To determine the character and extent of industrial equipment required and to apportion the task of its design, equipment and installation.

Necessities of Life.

"To provide for the immediate and continuing distribution of the necessities of life among the entire population, using all resources of employment, manufacture, credit and distribution requisite to that end.

"To visualize and to realize the distribution of credit required to make available the release of all the labor and other forces requisite to the carrying out of the balanced program.

"To provide equipment, personnel and supplies for education, recreation and research.

"To outline legal enactments necessary and convenient to remove obstacles and to facilitate the operation of such a program.

Social Self Control.

"What we must strive for is to make a beginning toward the creation of relationships through which industry, using the word in its most inclusive sense, can work toward conscious direction of the methods of social self-control, can develop the methods of democracy as applied to economic processes and perpetuate them by proper facilities. No recommendations can be offered beyond that. Democracy must find its own pathways, which are not without some pioneering trails, but in the new directions to be ascertained and followed the competence for finding right methods must lie in industry as a whole."

Mr. Woll warned that unless industry itself undertakes this task the federal government will be compelled to step in and, in contradiction to all previous American practice, take charge of the situation, he also emphasized the essential need of a Democratic procedure in carrying out any comprehensive plan for American industry as distinct from the dictatorial method in use in soviet Russia.

HOLDS 'LAWLESS' ACTS IMPERIL TAXES FOR 1930

Rees Claims Assessors Disregard Rights.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

John O. Rees, director of the joint tax commission, appointed by Mayor Cermak when president of the county board to investigate inequalities in taxation, charged yesterday that the board of assessors is placing the 1930 tax assessment in a doubtful legal position by its recent announcement severely restricting tax complaints and public hearings.

Mr. Rees' charges were made against the drab background of the county's financial affairs, for at present $50,000,000 of the 1928 taxes are delinquent and there is $120,000,000 of the county's 1929 tax bill unpaid. If Rees' predictions are true the county is in for more trouble instead of relief from the failure of tax collections.

One Day for Each District.

The law requires the assessors to give public notice when they will receive complaints and then give each protestor a hearing. The board has allowed only one day for the filing of these complaints by any one tax payer, although it has divided the county into four sections and will receive complaints from each section on one day out of four set aside from June 16 to 19. Mr. Rees doubts whether one day for complaints will not be in violation of "due process of law" guaranteed by the constitutions of the state and nation.

"Property owners have certain specific rights under the constitution and statutes of Illinois and under the rules of the state tax commission," said Mr. Rees. "Every owner has the right to file a complaint in writing, at the proper time, with the board of assessors. Each complainant has a right to a hearing before the board of assessors. Also every property owner has the right to file a complaint and have a hearing before the board of review."

It is the plan of the assessors and the reviewers to sit jointly on the complainants. Mr. Rees, after pointing out other rights of property owners, goes on:

"There is a constant tendency to deny these rights and to persuade property owners to waive them. An example of this tendency is the plan of the board of assessors.

"Not Reasonable Opportunity."

"In view of the fact that it would be a physical impossibility for ½ of 1 per cent of the property owners in the country towns and ¼ of 1 per cent of the property owners of Chicago to file complaints upon the days given, no one can claim seriously that a reasonable opportunity to file complaints is being given by the board of assessors. Failure to give reasonable opportunity to exercise the specific right of filing complaints threatens the validity of the assessment roll. Persistance in denying the legal rights of taxpayers will be a plausible, and under certain conditions, a valid reason for not paying the 1930 taxes."

Mr. Rees calls attention to the fact that the "board of review made and broadcast a finding that building assessments are 25 per cent too high."

"It is governmental suicide to flirt with a violation of due process of law in order to force this tax collection within seven months of the 1929 tax," Mr. Rees continued.

SOVIET OFFICIAL LAYS 'FORCED LABOR' TALK TO TIMBER TRUST

New York, June 14.—[Special.]—The agitation against the use of Russian timber because of charges that forced labor is employed in its preparation for export was inspired by an international timber trust, declared Dimitri Bogomoloff, counselor of the soviet embassy in London and former ambassador to Poland, in an address today. Mr. Bogomoloff defended labor conditions in soviet Russia, and spoke of the improvement of living conditions in his country under the five year plan.

His address was the second of a series of three to be devoted to the five year plan and problems arising therefrom.

He ridiculed the suggestion that 5,000,000 kulaks had been pressed into service in the timber industry.

Mr. Bogomoloff concluded with a plea for international peace and cooperation.

ANOTHER CRIME VISION OF GARY PRISONER TOLD

Another of the "imaginary crimes" of Ferdinand K. Daum, 54 year old Gary bookkeeper, was recounted to police in that city Saturday by E. J. Brennan, a restaurant counterman. He said that a year ago Daum suggested to him that they rob a jewelry store and get capital to set up as bootleggers. When he refused, Brennan said, he never heard of the matter again.

Daum and two alleged confederates, James Clayton, 28 years old, and Ted Hartman, 30 years old, are held for the investigation of a number of criminal exploits which they are charged with having planned but never executed, including kidnapings and stock counterfeiting. Police believe the "plots" originated in Daum's mind, stimulated by reading detective stories.

Healer to Be Arraigned Today on Quack Charge

Lester Tilton, 55 years old, of Clinton, Ia., is to be arraigned in the Felony court before Judge Matthew D. Hartigan today on a charge of practicing medicine without a license. Tilton, according to the state's attorney's office and the Illinois department of registration and education, has been posing as Dr. Tilton since 1906 in peddling a reputed cancer cure. He was served with a warrant on his farm near Fulton, Ill., on Saturday after a joint investigation by Assistant State's Attorney Charles A. Bellows and the state department.

"GEE, I'M A LUCKY DOG!"

"I've got the swellest new home! It's in a grocery store. There's a large basement with ever so many dark corners to explore, and a big back yard where I can romp or rest in the sunshine. Best of all, are the nights I spend behind the counters in the store, where I earn my keep as a watchdog. The last fellow who had this job got shot, but I'll take my chances, just to have that heavenly odor of food forever in my nose!

"How do I happen to be here? Well, my former owners bought me through an offer seen in the Tribune Want Ad Section. Knowing that something done once could be done again, they used the Tribune Want Ad Section to find a new home for me. Not only did I get the benefit of their wisdom, but they, too, for I was sold for more than three times the price they paid! $2,483,392 OWED ON NEW SCHOOLS; MAY TIE UP JOBS

Unpaid Contractors Will Decide Today.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

Construction work on Chicago public schools may stop on July 1, if not sooner, as the result of a threatened action of the contractors, who are to meet in the school board rooms this afternoon.

The reason for the threatened tieup is the board's failure to pay its bills. Last Thursday night the board was in default to the extent of $2,483,392 on 187 contracts, an average of about $13,000 each. Subtracting an estimated 15 per cent profit on the contracts, it appears that the contractors have put about $2,235,000 in cash into these jobs.

Some of the contractors have asked more credit from the material companies. Others have gone to their bankers. A large percentage have been unable to obtain an extension of their credit.

Building Fund in Debt.

The board has no money with which to meet the construction obligations it has incurred. The building fund, to which the contractors must look for their pay, now owes $2,450,000 against uncollected taxes of 1928, $7,440,000 against the 1929 taxes which have not been paid, and $13,000,000 against the 1930 taxes, which have not yet been assessed, and the legality of which is under fire.

These aggregate debts of $22,890,000, represented by unpaid tax anticipation warrants, are said to have a prior claim over the amounts due the contractors, on the taxes which will be turned into the building fund later.

The board has been unable to get any one to buy its 1931 tax warrants, and so that avenue to cash for the contractors has been closed so far. The only substitute for money which the board has offered is participation certificates secured by a trusteeship of tax anticipation warrants, which the school board has been unable to sell.

Decide 2 Questions Today.

The contractors this afternoon expect to decide whether they shall accept the participation certificates, and if they refuse to accept them, how long they can continue to work on credit.

Some of the contractors have directly or indirectly notified the board they cannot go on, unless paid. The William W. Hoier company, to whom the board owes $57,000 for work on the $1,300,000 addition to the Senn High school, has notified the supervising architect that it must suspend work on July 1 unless the board pays up. The Hoier company has the steam heating contract.

Other contractors have slowed down their work, it is said, employing from one-fifth to one-tenth as many men as usual in working in order not to sink any more uncollectible money in the contract than absolutely necessary.

The steam heating, plumbing and ventilation contractors on the Senn High school are working only a few men, according to the official reports. On the Verdi Junior High school job of $1,300,000, at Fifty-sixth and Rockwell streets, the general contractor has only six men working. The work has practically stopped because the board is in arrears on payments for work finished which it promised to pay.

Phillips Job Slows Up.

On the $2,500,000 Phillips High school, at Fiftieth and State streets, the heating, plumbing and ventilation contractors are working a few men. At the Jamieson school, a $450,000 job, the brickwork and walls are up to sill height, and the brickwork contractor is waiting for the window frames to be set. Jacob Swanson, carpenter contractor, could not be reached yesterday to ascertain whether he will proceed. The heating, plumbing and ventilation contractors on this building are making little progress, each working only two or three men.

The supervising architect on the Lane Technical High school, of which the estimated cost is $5,500,000, reports slow progress and asserts that the contractors should employ more men.

On this school alone the board owes the 17 contractors an aggregate of $551,945. Of the total $275,000 is due the W. E. O'Neil Construction company, $70,770 to Reuter Brothers, $110,000 to the U. S. Fireproofing company, $90,000 to W. A. Pope, $90,000 to the Bloomer Heating and Ventilating company, $42,000 to E. B. Kaiser, $80,000 to the Hub Electric company, $29,500 to Albert J. Wagner.

The $2,483,392, which the board owes construction contractors, is distributed as follows:

Amundsen Junior high—$47,099 to seven contractors.
Austin high—$119,058 to 14 contractors.
Barton—$500 to one contractor.
Barnard—$74.30 to one contractor.
Clissold—$37,072 to ten contractors.
Dixon—$900 to one contractor.
Farragut Junior high—$21,210 to six contractors.
Gompers—$584 to one contractor.
Gresham, addition—$27,449 to 11 contractors.
Harper Junior high—$8,800 to two contractors.
Harte—$14,421 to six contractors.
Holden addition—$10,100 to five contractors.
Jamieson—$35,200 to four conjractors.
Kelvyn Park Junior high—$6,945 to three contractors.
Kilmer—$60,038 to 15 contractors.
Lane high—$851,945 to 17 contractors.
Mann—$790 to one contractor.

SCHOOL TRUSTEES' CHOICE OF AUDIT FIRM IS CRITICIZED

Reconsideration by the school board of its action Thursday in engaging the Audit company of Cleveland to make a new survey of school expenditures was urged yesterday by the executive committee of the joint committee on public schools on the alleged ground that the public does not have confidence in the company's work.

The joint committee, composed of representatives from various civic groups, is headed by James Mullenbach, former school trustee. Its recommendations were made in a letter from Mr. Mullenbach to President Myers of the school board.

An examination of the report of a preliminary survey made by the company disclosed such "serious defects," Mr. Mullenbach declared, that "neither the teaching force nor the general public, so far as it is informed, can have any confidence in the ability of the company to perform the service that the board and the public had been led to expect."

RUSSIA TO SPEND 500 MILLIONS ON BIG STEEL PLANT

Hopes to Employ 120,000 in Siberian Project.

BY HENRY WALES.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

NOVO-SIBIRSK, Siberia, May 5.—[By mail via Harbin, Manchuria.]—Russia's hopes for a metal industry are concentrated now in the "Kuz-Bas," the Kuznetsk basin, 400 miles south of here, where the Freyn Engineering company of Chicago has contracts to construct a gigantic steel plant.

Since the bursting of the Magneto-Gorsk bubble the soviet leaders are carefully refraining from comparing the "Kuz-Bas" to Pittsburgh, Gary, or any other large production centers elsewhere, but they are confident of establishing a nucleus which will serve for amplification later.

Workers, men, women, entire families, are being herded into the Kuznetsk basin by the thousand to help in the construction of the different units of the huge project. The authorities estimate that by the end of the summer there will be an increase of 200,000 persons in the area.

Thousands to Sleep Outdoors.

The country for hundreds of miles around is being scoured and drained of supplies to accommodate the influx. All through the bitter winter weather, which reached 50 degrees below zero at times, preparations were going on to receive the throng; shacks, bunkhouses and messhalls were built.

Thousands will live under canvas and thousands more will sleep out in the open, beside their tough, shaggy Siberian ponies, as every worker drives to his location in his springless buckboard.

There are some misgivings over "Kus-Bas" even among the most fervent Reds. In the first place, there's the question of coal. There are millions of tons of peat, "brown coal," scattered all through the area, and relatively large deposits of anthracite. But there is very little of the bituminous available for coking.

Far Out of the Way.

Then there is the question of distance and distribution. Novo-Sibirsk, the capital of Siberia, is 2,000 miles from Moscow, due east, and the "Kur-Bas" is 250 to 300 miles south off the Trans-Siveria main line from Yurga, a station nearly a hundred miles further east of Novo-Sibirsk.

The trip from Yurga to Kuznetsk requires 21 hours as the dinky little train bumps over an unballasted line. The entire railway branch must be rebuilt. Work has been started to construct a modern double track line to the steel works, but with the shortage of material it cannot be completed soon.

South, clear south, almost to the foothills of the snow capped Altai mountains, separating Siberia from Manchuria, the ore deposits run. The original workings were up near Kemerovo, on the River Tomi. Then came the Leninsk collieries, then Trudomolskaya, where the Prokopiev mines possess 132,000,000 tons of deposits for pig iron smelting and raw coals.

At Ussiaty, where the Kondoma river joins the Tomi, is Kuznetsk, a town of less than 30,000 population last year, already grown to thrice that size.

250 Billion Tons of Coal.

More than 250 billion tons of coal are estimated in this zone, but the overwhelming proportion of it is not suitable for cooking. Less than 25 per cent can be volatized, it is admitted.

Just south of Kuznetsk proper, in the basin of the Telbess and Mundybash rivers, is the iron ore area, including the best ores of magnetite. Some estimates run as high as billions of tons of iron ore resources. The fields lead all the way south to the Altai range.

Freyn of Chicago is putting up a 1,250,000 ton capacity steel plant at Kuznetsk. There will be four blast furnaces, two with a capacity of 750 tons daily and two of 1,000 tons daily apiece. There will be fifteen open hearth 150 ton furnaces, one blooming mill, a rail and structural mill, a plate mill, a billet mill, three merchant mills, a power plant to develop 96,000 kilowatts, a steam plant, a coke plant of over 1,000,000 tons yearly capacity, a byproduct plant, a brick plant, and other units.

Work for 120,000 People.

The scheme includes a town site, located about five miles from Kuznetsk and adjoining the steel plant. Estimates are for a town to accommodate 120,000 people, all employed in the mills.

Every one is chary of mentioning costs in this project, but I have been informed that the Kremlin is prepared to expend in excess of five hundred million dollars if this plant can be carried out successfully.

A large part of the machinery for the plant has been ordered from the United States, but much is being purchased in Germany and some in England.

Work was started last year, and it is hoped to have some of the units completed in 1932.

Yanks Bothered by Vermin.

Freyn's engineers form a little American colony in Kuznetsk, some living in apartments in newly erected frame buildings, others in the hotel. The Americans had considerable trouble with bugs when they first arrived, but now have eliminated most of the vermin. They live in the new town site at the plant, and scarcely ever go to Kuznetsk, separated by five miles of fierce road, snow banks in winter and mud banks in summer.

E. P. Everhard of Chicago is in charge of the Freyn interests in Russia, and he has just made an inspection of the developments in Kuznetsk. There are 25 to 30 American engineers and specialists located at the plant and a dozen more are coming in this spring.

Ernest H. Koenig of Pueblo, Colo., is chief assistant to Mr. Everhard, and A. E. Baer of Chicago is in charge of all construction at Kuznetsk. G. P. Wilson of Westinghouse, Pa., is chief electrical engineer, and James A. Durfee of Cleveland is open hearth engineer. H. A. Fitzgerald of Buffalo is rolling mill engineer and L. A. Deesz of Pueblo is combustion engineer.

W. J. Crowe of Pueblo and O. W. Rice of Chicago are rolling mill and metallurgical engineers, respectively. Melvin Waldmuth and Herbert Smith are electrical engineers. Carl A. Fox of Chicago is open hearth designer, Lewis Galloway of Buffalo is blast furnace designer.

NAB INVESTIGATOR AS GUN TOTER.

RUSSIA ORDERS ALL DEAF, BLIND CHILDREN BE GIVEN EDUCATION

MOSCOW, June 14.—(AP)—The government today issued a decree calling for the compulsory education of children who are blind, deaf, mute, crippled or mentally deficient, in order that they might do something useful for their country. Under the decree, made public by Andrey Bubnoff, commissar of education, the training of youthful defectives is expected to be working fully by 1934.

In the soviet union there are listed 11,265 deaf and mute children. Of these 6,000 already are being trained. Three thousand of 7,305 blind children are being educated, and 20,000 of the 325,000 mental defectives are being trained.

With the present serious shortage of labor the government believes the training of this element will assist in solving the problem. Special schools are to be constructed for the defectives, and teachers already are undergoing special training.

When Muscles Need Toning
Golfing, swimming, walking or tennis are very good—but they are not enough. To keep young, slim and vitally healthy, the muscles controlling the heart, liver, lungs, kidneys and intestines must function properly. Muscle Sense tones these important muscles and makes you feel and look like a different person. Mr. White has had 25 years of experience as well as university training in anatomy. He builds health while accomplishing remarkable results in reducing. Many women lose 15 to 20 pounds in just 25 treatments. Best of all, this weight does not come back.

$700,000 BRIDGE OPEN TODAY, BUT TRY AND USE IT

Burnham Av. Project Approaches Not Finished.

BY HAL FOUST.

The Cook county highway department announced yesterday that its new $400 viaduct at Burnham avenue over the Grand Calumet river and nearby tracks will be open to traffic today. However, there will be little traffic, because south of the viaduct Burnham avenue is several blocks of dirt, while north of the expensive improvement is a stretch of bumpy streets and dangerous railroad grade crossings.

MAJ. QUINLAN.

Work was started on the structure in September, 1929. It was to form a new automobile outlet from Chicago to the south. Such a thoroughfare was badly needed—and is still lacking—because there was no crossing of the Grand Calumet between Torrence avenue and Hohman street, a distance of two miles. Furthermore, Torrence has three dangerous bridges and some rough pavement, while Hohman is congested with street cars and parking and has some busy railroad grade crossings.

Pavement on Blue Prints.

Even before work was started on the viaduct, the county highway department was preparing plans for a good approach from the south and for opening a new road from the north through the undeveloped country between the Calumet river and Wolf lake. But the prospective pavement is still merely prospective, on the blue prints only.

First there were delays while authorities and civic organizations argued about the route of the new road. It was finally decided to use Avenue L from 95th street to 106th street and thence on Avenue O from 106th to 110th street.

Right of way was obtained and the county prepared the working specifications, which were forwarded to the state highway department at Springfield for approval. This approval was necessary because the state supervises the county's expenditure of its 1 cent share of the gasoline tax.

State Enters Objection.

The state objected to the county's design for the crossing at grade of the Pennsylvania railroad tracks. Months went by while State Highway Engineer Sheets and County Highway Engineer Quinlan exchanged polite correspondence on the subject.

A few weeks ago the legislature passed a bill giving the counties greater authority in spending gas tax funds in municipalities. Maj. Quinlan now hopes that the state and county can reach an agreement. Maj. Quinlan also hopes that the Burnham avenue thoroughfare can be completed this summer so that the $700,000 investment can be put into active service by next winter.

To visit the viaduct, merely out of curiosity, motorists can drive south from 95th street on Torrence avenue, east on 106th street, south on Baltimore avenue, southeast on Brainard avenue, and south on Burnham avenue. There are rough pavements where a speed over 20 miles an hour is dangerous as well as uncomfortable, and there are some railroad crossings where unusual caution is advisable, according to the Chicago Motor club.

Must Use Dirt Roads.

After crossing the viaduct from the north, a short stretch of dirt road will take the exploring motorist to Sibley boulevard, which can be followed west to Torrence avenue or east to Hammond, Ind., Or by driving another half mile south over dirt, Burnham avenue pavement can be reached and followed to Lansing to connect with Ridge road for points east.

In building the structure, the contract price was $644,947. However, extras added after the contract was let boosted the cost to $700,000. The Michigan Central railroad agreed to pay $125,976; the Indiana Harbor Belt line, $198,424, and the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, $34,000. The county's share was $286,547, but the county road fund must pay $65,000 more for the extras.

TWO MEN DROWN AS FERRY BOAT COLLIDES WITH MOTOR LAUNCH

New York, June 14.—(AP)—Two men drowned and a man and woman were rescued late today, when their motor launch was wrecked in collision with a municipal ferryboat off Clason Point.

The ferryboat Elmhurst, operated between Clason Point and College Point, hit the small power craft, Ada Iola, as the ferry was leaving its slip, loaded with passengers.

Andrew Beck, 36, and Edward Walsh were swept under the ferry and vanished.

Arthur Thornton, 41, and Rose Golden, 32, of White Plains, who were seated on the stern deck of the little craft, escaped injury. Thornton managed to beach his boat about 500 feet away.

The bow and stern of the launch were stove in. No damage was done to the ferryboat.

SPAIN REFUSES ALFONSO'S PLEA TO RETURN HOME

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, June 14.—King Alfonso yesterday made a dramatic offer to the republican government for his return to Spain in the capacity of a private citizen, promising that he would give every assistance which was in his power to his countrymen, according to reports in London today.

In acknowledging the king's offer Premier Zamora replied:

"The republican government is profoundly touched with the magnificent offer conveyed by your courier, but it feels that, owing to the recent critical position, it would not be wise to give the extremists any loophole for political intrigue.

"The government, however, is aware that much good work can be done for Spain in your foreign sphere, and it will be grateful if, at all events for the time being, you will continue to exercise your influence in maintaining friendly relations between Spain and other powers."

PRINCE SUES HIS EX-WIFE TO MAKE HER GIVE UP NAME

BY EGBERT SWENSON.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, June 14.—People get used to names and often grow quite fond of them, especially if they're chic and sonorous, and practically nobody likes to have a name snatched away overnight after about 28 years of service.

Of course, old Bill Shakespeare had quite a bit of fun "about what's in a name," but he never had the trouble that the prince de Colloredo-Mansfeld and the two princesses de Colloredo-Mansfel dare having right now. For one thing, he never landed in a Parisian court and produced a "very Parisian trial," as the prince and one of the princesses have just done.

The prince is suing his former wife, Princess de Colloredo-Mansfeld, who is of French-English parentage and has the sort of hair that Titian did so much for. He wants her to give up his name and let his second wife, Marie de Smit, carry on alone.

He Even Wants Damages.

The prince feels so strongly about the matter—as former captains of Uhlans can—that he wants his first wife to hand over $3,910 for "past confusions" and pay $20 a day for other troubles if the court decides in his favor.

As for the Princess de Colloredo-Mansfeld, who was married to him in 1903 in Paris and divorced him at Prague twenty-two years later, she insists that she has a perfect right to use the old name and intends most firmly to do it.

The prince couldn't be reached at his home in Paris. He has given up soldiering for the country life, it seems, and now walks over fields, spade in hand, where once he rode with a lance. His family is one of the oldest in Europe, being established in Bohemia centuries ago, but modern Czechoslovakia has taken away his titles except for courtesy.

Squabbles have been frequent between the prince and his first wife ever since the English born daughter of a Frenchman and Englishwoman broke with him. First there was a suit over a diadem which she won.

Then the prince tried to keep her name of Princess de Colloredo-Mansfield out of the phone book, "Tout Paris," the "Bottin Mondain," and other registers of the elite. But she won again. (On the other hand, it was only this year that the new princess got her name in the Almanach de Gotha, which means a lot.)

She Stands on Czech Law.

The case boils down to this: The prince insists that she should use her maiden name, as is required of French women after a divorce, but she and her lawyer say that Czecho-Slovak laws must determine the issue. As the divorce was granted in Prague, she has every right to continue to use her name, since the Czech law reads that divorcees must retain their husband's cognomen, they insist.

"Give me but the liberty of the press and I will give to the minister a venal house of peers. I will give him a corrupt and servile commons. I will give him the full swing of the patronage of office. I will give him the whole host of ministerial influence. I will give him all the power that place can confer upon him, to purchase up submission and overcome resistance; and yet, armed with the liberty of the press, I will attack the mighty fabric of that mightier engine. I will shake down from its height corruption and bury it beneath the ruins of the abuses it was meant to shelter!"

BUILDING FOR PROSPERITY.

The Rosenwald housing project for Negroes, known as the Michigan Boulevard Garden apartments, is earning a moderate return on the investment. The experiment in model housing was undertaken deliberately under circumstances which were by no means unduly favorable to the success of the scheme. It was Mr. Rosenwald's purpose to discover whether large scale model housing for families with incomes of $2,500 or less could be made to pay, for, if it could, private capital might be enlisted. If his experiment has not proved the case to the hilt, it has, at least, provided a considerable basis for the belief that large investments in urban housing projects can be made secure as to both principal and a moderate income.

There can be no doubt that the next congress will see an almost unprecedented demand for government relief of the unemployed. The successful appeal of the farmers for a $500,000,000 fund is an index of what may be expected when congress undertakes to help the urban unemployed. The progress of the soldiers' bonus bills is another indication. Already Mr. Brookhart is agitating for the distribution of the other 50 per cent of the bonus and the cancellation of all interest charges. There are today in this country, in all probability, several million more unemployed than there are veterans. There are probably at least as many urban unemployed as there ever were destitute farmers. If enormous appropriations have been voted for farmers and veterans, grants can be obtained, as well, for the unemployed.

Scant attention will be paid the argument that the dole in whatever form it is proposed will, in the long run, only make matters worse. Congressmen paid little attention to similar warnings with respect to the farmers' fund. The argument that put the bonus over was the contention that the infusion of a billion dollars, more or less, into the channels of trade would stimulate business and restore prosperity. The fact that it has not done so will be forgotten. Congressmen respond to the arguments that they want to heed. With millions of unemployed voters on one side and a handful of skeptical bankers and economists on the other, it is not difficult to predict the course of events. And the fact that the country is full of idle money, as the success of the Mellon loan proves, will not help the opposition.

Whether congress votes a dole of the sort which is preventing a revival of British industry or merely floats a colossal loan for unspecified and unproductive public works makes little difference. The essential fact is that money will be taken from those who have it and given to those who haven't and capital which might be used productively will be dissipated. Income taxes will be raised to meet the additional burden on the treasury and, as the taxes rise, money for investment in genuinely productive enterprises will be lacking. When the bond money or the doles have all been spent the country will be worse off than before the operation was commenced.

Free bread with or without circuses never solved the problem of economic stagnation and never will. Doles create only the demand for larger doles in the future. Though the folly of the dole is obvious, the men and women in this country who pay income taxes had better recognize the fact that if they do not invest their money in undertakings which will provide employment their money will be taken away from them in a false effort to attain national well being through federal charity.

It is in the light of this analysis that the significance of the Rosenwald and similar experiments in large scale housing becomes clear. Business men are looking for a new industry to save the country from the depression, oblivious of the fact that the need for decent housing facilities in our cities today is greater than the need for any other basic commodity, whether food, clothing, transportation or entertainment. There is much talk about an overproduction of buildings and it is true that we have more office buildings and more hotels and apartment houses of the higher grades than we seem to have immediate need for. But the production of dwellings for families of limited means has lagged. The buildings are relatively small, seldom housing more than a dozen or two families. All the economies of large scale financing, large scale planning and large scale building have been neglected. It should be and we now know it is possible to provide far better quarters for the same amount of rent if whole blocks or, even better, whole areas of the city can be taken over and rebuilt.

Any one who has come into Chicago on a railroad train, any one who has looked out of the windows of an elevated car in many areas of the city, any one who has driven through the poorer districts of Chicago or any other great city needs no argument to prove that our present housing facilities are a menace to health and an invitation to crime and degeneracy. The clearing of the slums is perhaps the biggest task which confronts the people of our great cities today. The job can occupy all the building mechanics we have for a generation to come. It will make business for all the metal working industries, all the woodworking industries, all the railroads. As a stimulator it has no equal.

To be sure, there are difficult questions of finance and law to be solved before the task can be undertaken in a large way, but these questions ought not to prove insoluble. Hitherto the incentive to a solution has been lacking. Now, in the face of the economic depression and the certainty that if business does not pick up, taxation will, the incentive is here. If there is any vision among our bankers, labor leaders, business men and lawyers, the opportunity to rescue the country from its present situation will not be passed over. Mr. Rosenwald's pioneering effort in housing may prove the most noteworthy contribution he has made to the welfare of his countrymen.

SECRETARY HURLEY AT PEORIA.

Secretary of War Hurley is to take part in the ceremonies attending the arrival at Peoria of the first barges placed in the new Illinois river service. It is fitting that the secretary should be on hand, for he has shown great interest in the success of the Illinois waterway, the final link between the lakes and the gulf. He will have the satisfaction of marking the completion of the waterway from Pittsburgh and New Orleans to Peoria and within a few months he may have the even greater satisfaction of marking the completion of the waterway to Chicago and the great lakes.

Of all the public works which the government has undertaken with a view to relieving business depression, the Illinois waterway is likely to be most serviceable. It will breathe new life into the great central valleys by reducing transportation costs; it will increase the incomes of farmers in the corn and cotton belt. New industries will be created. Dormant cities and towns will be rejuvenated with new industrial and commercial life. The waterway will stimulate the building of new warehouses, new railroad connections, and new barges. It will increase the territory in which manufacturers and distributors scattered all the way from Ogdensburg, N. Y., to New Orleans will be able to sell their products.

The Illinois waterway is destined to become one of the great arteries of transportation in this country. As a public improvement it will rank with the locks at the Soo and the Welland canal. The approaching completion of the locks and dams above Peoria will bring into being a vital new force in American economic life. It is Mr. Hurley's good fortune that he can hasten the day when this great public work will be placed in service.

MR. FESS HITS HIGH.

Senator Fess of Ohio has been under promise to deliver something in high for the Republican party ever since very early in the spring. He went to Florida to get in training—a week or ten days being sufficient, as the senator is nearly always in the pink—and was expected to appear in virile leadership soon after his return. Something detained him, probably the lack of opportunity, but the recent meeting of the Young Republicans in Washington was an evident occasion and Mr. Fess, as chairman of the national committee, was there to improve it.

Presumably the meeting was one of questing Republican youth seeking evidences of faith and turning to the elder statesmen. This was the big moment for leadership in high gear and Mr. Fess stepped out keynoting. His message was that in the best of all possible worlds the Republican party is the best of all political parties. That is Mr. Fess' story and its simplicity is its beauty. When he has on his ceremonial robes and is ready to lead the chant all things seem right, as the Republican party has ordained them. Prohibition is the glory of the law. Peace blooms and prosperity multiplies under it. The latest tariff is a jolly thing. The good farmer relieved of his wheat joins the thrush in a hymn to the morning sun. National defenses are left to the trailing vine and the chorus of the grasshopper and the black cricket.

The Fessian rhapsody is the thrilling call of virile leadership to stand and admire things as they are under the greatest of parties in its greatest of moments.

SENATOR LEWIS' PROPOSAL.

[The Bloomington Pantagraph.]

Now comes Senator James Hamilton Lewis, junior member of the United States senate from Illinois, and proposes that when cities get into such a financial pinch as Chicago now is that the federal government lend them its credit as a measure of relief. Addressing the state association of bankers assembled in Chicago, Senator Lewis put forth this seemingly remarkable plan.

The senator cites the statement of the mayor of Chicago and officials of Cook county that the united debts of the city and county exceed three hundred million dollars, and that there are not now any securities for such debts which would excuse bankers for lending further funds to either city or county. Senator Lewis says he is further advised that in Illinois are 11 other cities, ranging in population from 5,000 to 100,000, which are facing similar embarrassment.

Unless some relief is quickly afforded, government in these cities will cease to function, resulting in a feeling of "revenge in the heart or anarchy in the mind" of their citizens.

The senator comes then to his plan of suggesting that "where credit in actual and potential assets exist for taxing purposes," that the United States shall extend its credit and loans of money to towns, cities and states, upon such conditions as the federal government and the lesser governments shall arrange.

Such procedure is not without precedent in the history of governments, as Senator Lewis points out. Rome and Egypt pursued a similar policy toward their various communities. Great Britain lends money from the Bank of England to the boroughs and towns. Denmark and Holland have a system of loans practically identical.

This suggestion of Senator Lewis is made in the face of a statement from the secretary of the treasury of the United States that the national treasury will be facing deficits of hundreds of millions of dollars in the next year or two. Just how a treasury which is without funds to meet its own current obligations is to embark upon a system of gigantic loans to states, counties or cities is a little difficult to understand.

PREVENTION OF LEG GANGRENE.

A CONSIDERABLE number of people are in danger of gangrene of the feet because of the diseased condition of the arteries of the lower legs. This is true of all diabetics. But they have no monopoly. A great many people of the Jewish race are prone to develop what is commonly called Buerger's disease. Without having diabetes they become liable to gangrene of the feet.

Nor have the Jews a monopoly of Buerger's disease. A closely related disorder is intermittent claudication. People who are subject to that are prone to have painful spasms in the calf muscles. A man with this malady will start out for a walk. Perhaps he pushes a little too fast. He is stopped by leg cramps.

As though the number was too restricted it has been suggested that the people who are very prone to leg cramps at night are headed in the same direction, though rarely do any of them go far enough to land in the group of men with endangered feet. Behind the condition lies a certain amount of disease of the large arteries of the leg.

Dr. Livingstone has some advice for all the members of this large group. They must keep their feet very clean. The standard of foot cleanliness which suffices for the general run of people is far too low for these people. They must wear loose, comfortable shoes. Abrasions due to shoe rub, nail cutting, corn trimming, and such ordinarily simple home surgery are particularly dangerous. The skin of the feet must be kept soft by rubbing them daily with cocoa butter.

A simple procedure that helps to maintain circulation in the legs is any exercise which alternately elevates the feet above the level of the prostrate body, and then lowers them. Contrast foot baths are of service. The feet are submerged for one minute in cold water at 55 degrees Fahrenheit, and then in warm water at 105 degrees. This is done several times a day. Exposing the feet to radiant heat and using diathermy on them, Dr. Livingstone thinks should prove of service.

LET THEM ALONE.

S. L. M. writes: I was born in 1847. Soon after I began to nurse, my mother said to her doctor: "This child does not nurse right and I wish you would see if she is tongue tied and, if so, cut the strings, for I can't have a lisping child." The doctor found she was right and did as she requested. The cut strings are still in evidence on the under side of my tongue, one each on two parallel veins. They are very short, one longer than the other. They begin sort of web-like and end in strings. I can get hold of them, but they are so short and slippery I can't hold on long.

I have never had the least difficulty in speaking, the only result being too much tongue, as it always gets in the way of the dentist, and once in a while I chew the side of it when eating. I have been so grateful to my mother, for with deafness from scarlet fever, if I had lisping also to contend with I don't think I would have had the courage to grow up. I have wanted so much to ask you if you would think it advisable, when on the subject of babies, to tell the mother to have the doctor examine the mouth for any trouble affecting speech. Now that the babies are mostly bottle fed, I suppose any defect will not be discovered until they begin to talk. I am so sorry for children with any physical defect, for the normal ones are so unmerciful to them.

I have wondered if the tongue tied strings in the adult mouth can be cut with safety. It is so very ridiculous to hear them lisp and it must be very mortifying.

REPLY.

Being tongue tied does not cause lisping. It rarely causes any trouble. Perhaps it interferes with nursing at times. Don't worry about those stumps, however; let them alone. Do not have them amputated. It is inadvisable to try to feel them or pull them.

HAVE YOU ANY SYMPTOMS?

V. M. writes: A friend of mine has tuberculosis and I am forced to be with her a great deal. I have made it a practice to sleep with her once a week for the last year, and now I am wondering if there is a possibility that I have the disease. She is a very clean and careful person, but I suppose I have been exposed to her breath.

REPLY.

There is. Have you any symptoms?

CIVIL SERVICE EXAMS.

Chicago, June 9.—[Friend of the People.]—Will you kindly tell me whether they employ girl stenographers at the city hall and detective bureaus? If so, do these stenographers have to take a civil service test? Where and when can they take such a test? A. S.

Female stenographers are not used in the police department.

They are, however, used in the various other departments and we have placed the name of the writer on our mailing list for notification of the next examination called for the position of junior stenographer.

JAMES S. OSBORNE, Secretary,
Chicago Civil Service Commission.

LEGAL INTEREST RATE.

Chicago, June 8.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—1. What action can be taken against a pawnbroker who sells a pledge before the year has expired?

2. What rate of interest can lawfully be charged for small loans on merchandise? C. C.

1. One course would be to sue him for the value of the article.

2. The limit for pawnbrokers is 3 per cent per month.

MUST START NEW SUIT.

Chicago, June 7.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—A tenant was in default for three months' rent. The landlord gave him five days' notice, and the court issued an order to vacate within ten days. The tenant paid the agent one month's rent, and kept the flat.

1. Should the landlord start new court proceedings when the tenant is again in default?

2. Or is the first court order still valid? A. H.

It seems probable that the circumstances of the rent payment are such as to imply a continuance of the tenancy, so that new proceedings on the part of the landlord would be necessary.

SPEECH OF MARMADUKE MUGGS ON RECEIVING HIS HONORARY DEGREE AS DOCTOR OF SOMETHING OR OTHER.

Alumni, graduates, faculty, and the rest of you here! Greetings. I thank you one and all for being made a Honorary Doc. I've always wanted some kind of a college degree because it gives a fellow class, if you get what I mean. The president of this brains factory has told you I got my doctor's degree by my great service to humanity in inventing a orange that will not squirt juice in the eye.

He has told you in much better language than I can tell you because I never had the chance of going to college and learning grammar and stuff like that. While he was filling his hide full of knowledge I was out getting the kale. He got the learning and I got the mazuma, and now I go to Europe on my private yacht and he goes third class tourist. He don't get as much coin for running this college as I pay my chauffeur, but he's satisfied, and so is the chauffeur, and so am I, and everybody's happy.

You birds in the graduation class are going out to conquer the world, which is a swell idea. The world is full of money; try and get it. But there's lot of big opportunities, and I don't mean peddling bonds. Lemme tell you something: the world right now is waiting for the bird that will remove hitch-hikers from the public highways. There must be some way of eradicating 'em. You can take soup spots out of neckties, you can take chicken gravy stains out of your new summer flannel suit, you can get rust offen your golf irons; then there must be some way of eradicating hitch-hikers from the outer lane. Find out and you'll be rich and some college will jump up and confer a Doc. degree all over you.

And that hain't all. Us millionaires are dragged by our wives to grand opera and symphony concerts. There must be some way of making them dam things practically painless. Make 'em so's they won't give us a pain in the neck and come around and collect your coin. Or invent some way of keeping farmers satisfied. Or some way of making people shut up; fer inst., them people that explain the movies to their companion who is always deafer than a post.

Invent some kind of a postal card that when people write on it, "Having a grand time, wish you were here," will travel around in the mail awhile and then come right back to the guy that wrote it. Invent a scheme that will automatically put a guy in jail who calls you up when you're trying to put over a deal to gyp some other guy out of two million smackers and says, "Lend me five bucks until tomorrow."

Invent a radio that Rudy Vallee can't be heard on more than five feet away, and you'll get all the mazuma you want and so many honorary doctor degrees you can paper the garage with 'em. Thanking you for your attention and assuring you that I am not in the market for bonds, I will now pass out to my sixteen cylinder automobile, where my chauffeur will distribute peanuts and hot dogs to one and all. I thank you and wish you a merry Christmas and a happy Fourth of July.

BALLAD OF THE SWAMP GIRL.

My heart is merry when birds are glad
And the blossom's over the thorn,
But never a heart like this I had
Since the day my heart was born;

Now hunger follow me all my life
And sit at my door forever
If ever I lend my heart to strife
Against my own true lover;

O bird, and if he come not today
I pray I may die tomorrow,
Lest my feet go lame in the lonesome way
And my torn heart break for sorrow.

Then bury me under the blue, blue skies
And bury me under the corn,
And darkness cover away my eyes
From the blossom over the thorn;

And look that never a headstone shows
Where my heart's love died a-borning;
But plant me wide with the wild pink rose
That blooms in the merry morning.

And lovers may come and lovers may pass
And lovers may gather the bloom,
But I'll be cold in the tomb, alas,
I'll be cold in the tomb.

THE FRONT PAGE story of the murders and mysteries concerning young people in high places who drank strong liquor of various sorts suggest that the 18th amendment didn't go far enough. It only forbid the use of genuine whisky and wine and the abolition of the saloon. Why not have a law forbidding the drinking of bath tub whisky, synthetic gin, canned heat, needled beer, white mule, and things like that, and forbidding speakeasies? Let us have a constitutional amendment at once. Write to your congressman today!

THE MONKEY STATE stands pat; Tennessee, by an overwhelming vote in its legislature, refuses to repeal its famous law prohibiting the teaching of evolution. The argument used in Tennessee is, "I hain't er gwine ter admit thet my gran'pa wuz er monkey." It's a perfectly sound argument; almost any of us would hate to admit that. And, besides, if they were to admit that there was something in the theory of evolution some crank would jump up and insist they quit voting for Andy Jackson at every presidential election. And that they'll never do.

BLUE MONDAY today, but, ah, little Pollyannas, let us all put on a sweet smile and make others smile, too. And here is what will make us smile: the W. C. T. U. gels say that government control of likker in Canada and Sweden does not prevent drunkenness, poverty, and crime. And we are led to infer that government control in these U. S. DOES prevent drunkenness, poverty, and crime. Lykell, lykell, lykell, R. H. L.

IT ISN'T THE SIZE OF THE CLUB THAT COUNTS, IT'S THE MAN BEHIND IT

FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

16 YEARS AGO TODAY

JUNE 15, 1915.

CHICAGO.—The city council in one of the stormiest sessions in its history took two definite steps on the street car strike which started yesterday morning. It empowered the mayor to name a special committee of aldermen to take complete charge of the strike situation in an effort to effect an immediate settlement and it passed an ordinance, fathered by Ald. Kennedy [Socialist], seeking to prohibit the employment of strike breakers. The mayor named on the special strike committee Ald. Henry D. Capitain, James H. Lawley, John A. Richert, William J. Healy, and Willis O. Nance. The companies deny they are importing nonunion men to man the cars, but three private detective agencies were responsible for the statement that 1,000 men had been engaged.

CHICAGO.—With all its traction facilities suddenly shut off, the city met and solved the problem of getting home from work last night with carnival spirit. The half million loop workers poured into the streets between 5 and 6 o'clock. Thousands of them swept on the railroad stations. Improvised jitney buses—converted express wagons, carts, drays, trucks, horse drawn and motor driven—lured thousands to a merry ride homeward.

JUNE 15, 1901.

NEW YORK.—The ferryboat Northfield, with 600 passengers aboard, was sunk tonight in East river at the foot of Coenties slip, where it had drifted after a collision with the Mauch Chunk. How many persons perished is not known, and until reports of those missing from home come in it will be impossible to estimate the loss of life. The collision happened a few minutes after 6 o'clock, when all the ferryboats from the Battery were jammed with commuters.

NEW YORK.—The Chinese in the United States are preparing for an organized fight to obtain the absolute repeal of the Geary exclusion act at the coming session of congress. The movement was started in this city early in the week, and it is expected to spread rapidly to Philadelphia, Chicago, Portland, Seattle, San Francisco, and other cities having large Chinese populations.

WEST BADEN, Ind.—Of the 268 persons, including a number of Chicagoans, who were in the Mineral Springs hotel here this morning when the fire which destroyed it began, it is now believed that every one escaped with his life, although narrow escapes were numerous. The fire started in the kitchen and quickly spread to the sleeping quarters. Many were forced to flee in their night robes, leaving all valuables behind. Among the Chicagoans who experienced the thrills of the escape were Miss Blanche Hall, Miss Amy Leslie, and W. H. Cramer.

LONDON.—T. P. O'Connor, home rule member for Galway borough and one of Parnell's parliamentary lieutenants, obtained permission to introduce in the commons a bill for suspension of evictions in Ireland upon the payment by the tenants of six months' rent. Following so quickly on Parnell's declaration that he would not obstruct the land bill the permission given O'Connor may be looked upon in the light of a concession to the Parnellites by the government.

LONDON.—At Ascot, Pierre Lorillard's Iroquois won the Prince of Wales stake, Geologist second, and Great Carle third. The race was witnessed by a royal party composed of the prince of Wales, the duke and duchess of Connaught, Prince and Princess Christian, the prince and princess of Teck, Prince Leopold, and the duke of Cambridge. Iroquois' victory appeared very popular with the crowds which witnessed the race. Archer was again the rider of Iroquois as he was when the horse won the Derby. It is the first time the Derby winner also won the Prince of Wales stake.

CHICAGO.—Eli Bates of the pioneer lumber firm of Mears, Bates & Co. died at his home, 480 Dearborn avenue, in his 75th year. The lumber firm was organized in 1850 with Mr. Bates as a foreman in the yard.

ANY SUGGESTIONS?

Oak Park, Ill., June 8.—Maybe some one can help solve my problem. I'm not licked by any means, but I am bewildered. Two years ago I was a successful contractor of buildings, now, I am selling our furniture to feed my family.

Is there something the matter with me that I can't get work? I am neat, intelligent, and my past record of bill paying, honesty, etc., is what it should be. The references I have from business men are excellent, and my character is also, that much I do know. I also know I am ambitious, a hard worker and I like work.

In the last crash I lost about $25,000 because I paid every cent I owed. I sold everything I had to meet my debts. "I'm young," I said, "I can start over; my past is clean." But now I am wondering when I can start. I'll do anything, and do it well, even sweep the streets, glad to do it, anything so I can feed my kids. I have felt up to the present, surely in a country like America, no one really would starve, but now I am doubtful, because I am on my last $10.

I have tried to sell my home. I can't pay taxes or interest and before I lost even that I wanted to sell it, and I offered it at less than $2,000 off the price I paid for it, after putting in over $2,000 in improvements. Now I am trying to sell the last of my furniture, and then what? What do references, clean record, ambition or anything mean, when I see your kids with great big eyes asking, "What does it all mean, pop?"

I can't lose my faith, because I can't take that away from the kids. So with all your many readers, maybe some one will steer me right. I'm stumped.

EXPENSIVE BALL GAMES.

Chicago, June 9.—Every paper has something about the necessity of the board of education to economize. One way to save a lot of money would be to prohibit all ball playing in or near the school yards.

It seems to me that a grade school yard is not the place for grown boys and men to play ball, shake dice, curse, etc., every night and Sunday, but such is the condition at the Newton Bateman grade school on North Sacramento and Berteau avenues. This has been going on for several years and I'm sure the cost of replacing broken windows and other damage would amount to a sizeable sum. Residents of the neighborhood have protested and tried to stop it but it continues. Who is to blame for this laxness? L. M.

PENALTIES COMPARED.

Hampton, Ia., June 2.—About two years ago a young lad here received a sentence of fifteen years in the penitentiary for passing a check for $2. In comparing his sentence with Kirkland's I have come to the conclusion that it pays to kill.

THE EDUCATIONAL AUDIT.

Chicago, June 10.—If the situation were a little less desperate, the report of the audit company of Cleveland on the financial affairs of the board of education would be funny. No audit was needed to tell us that suspending salary increases or curtailing educational activities would reduce expenditures. For that matter, closing the schools entirely for an indefinite period and paying no salaries at all would very effectively reduce expenses. Moreover, according to a news report, out of a total budget of $92,875,676.75, the "savings" suggested amounted to $1,403,365. That, as one principal pointed out, would be sufficient to run our schools for less than one week!

The thing that most of us would really like to know is why the money could be operated for $56,626,814 in 1925, while in 1931, if the budget is followed, $92,875,676.75 is going to be required. That is an increase of over 64 per cent. Few of us believe that this increase can be adequately explained by the growth of the schools or by increased educational activities. It needs explaining, and no "audit" which fails to explain it is worthy of the name.

Moreover, the board of education must have this information—that is, if it is sincere in its desire to eliminate waste and inefficiency. It is quite possible that if a really determined effort is made in this direction there may be no need of suspending salary increases or curtailing valuable educational services.

ELLEN F. HUNT.

THE ROYAL PREROGATIVE.

Odin, Ill., June 1.—On his way to the Derby the governor of the wonderful state of Missouri was met on the western side of Illinois and carried across the state on route 12 by a mob of motorcycle cops, sirens blowing and screeching, at not less than 50 miles per hour through incorporated towns, villages and cities, no attention being paid to traffic stops, heavy traffic, main streets with people crossing the road or any other rules that common people must obey. And many reports say that 50 miles was slow most of the time on his trip across the state while everybody else had to get out of his way or be run over.

Illinois taxpayers must pay for these motorcycles, pay the wages of the cops and buy new sirens when old ones are worn out. Just an item, but it takes money that had better be spent legitimately.

GERMANY'S PLIGHT.

Albion, Mich., June 8.—Your editorial today shows the only reason for Germany's plight. The treaty of Versailles was planned to ruin Germany financially and morally. I believe if the German people had known what atrocities were in store for them at the end of the war they would have fought to the last man. In 1918 Germany trusted in the idealism of Wilson, who afterwards, in his ignorance, helped to make the ruinous treaty of Versailles.

Everybody realizes now that Germany does her best to come up to her obligations. But one must see to it that she has a chance to live and work off the enormous sums she has to bring in every year.

WIRTH PREDICTS DRASTIC CUTS IN REPARATION DEBT

French Aid for Bruening Is Hinted.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, June 14.—Dr. Karl Joseph Wirth, minister of the interior, speaking at Hildesheim today, said:

Dr. KARL J. WIRTH.

"We are started on the road toward drastic reduction in reparations payments. All necessary steps in this direction have been taken."

When asked if this meant that Germany had formally applied for a revision of the Young plan payments through channels provided in the Young plan, Dr. Wirth refused to answer.

Cabinet officials in Berlin asserted tonight that no new steps in the reparations question will be taken until after the visit of Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson to Europe.

BERLIN, June 14.—Undersecretary of State William A. Castle's statement yesterday that the United States government does not consider its frequently reiterated position on the war debts and reparations as signifying an inflexible thesis is being eagerly interpreted here as presaging an early shift in the official American attitude. The further circumstance that it is coincidental with the European visits of Secretaries Mellon and Stimson only serves to accelerate speculation over the nature of the mandate conferred on both by President Hoover.

PARIS, June 14.—A clear intimation to Heinrich Bruening that if he regains at his post as German chancellor and succeeds in imposing his constitutional policies upon contending parties, financial rehabilitation of the reich will naturally follow, is contained in a significant leading editorial in tonight's semi-official Temps. Those who are in position to reflect the French government's point of view regarding the present German crisis interpret the article not only as unqualified official support for the Bruening government, but an accurate indication that this country, with its vast stores of idle capital, will go to the rescue of Germany provided the elements of revolution and war are once more effectually put down within the reich.

BRIAND APPEALS TO WOMEN OF THE WORLD FOR PEACE

Answers Enemies in a Bitter Attack.

GOURDON, France, June 14.—(AP)—Foreign Minister Aristide Briand this afternoon launched an earnest plea to the women of the world to support his work in behalf of universal peace with all their energies.

ARISTIDE BRIAND.
[Acme Photo.]

In a moving oration the veteran statesman, who a month ago was defeated for the presidency of France, vigorously defended his pacific policy. His message was addressed to nearly 5,000 French war veterans and their mothers, wives, sisters, and daughters.

Counts on the Women.

"I count on the women," he shouted. "It is to them that I turn, and if I felt any profound joy today it is to see in their eyes so much joy at the thought that the cause of peace will continue to be defended.

"As long as they are with us, as long as they defend their little ones and their brothers and their husbands, and with the goodness of their hearts try to defend humanity against wars and atrocities, our cause will be in good hands. I beg them not to desert it."

Referring to the Kellogg peace treaty, M. Briand declared:

"I had the good fortune, in accord with the great republic of the United States, to cause a pact to be signed by all civilized nations—a pact which condemns war and which denounces it as a crime.

Addresses Former Soldiers.

"It is not admissable that these civilized countries, having unanimously denounced was as a crime, would allow it to be reborn tomorrow under the influence of any aggression."

He rejoiced that there were present so many former soldiers who "now preserve of war only a remembrance to be cursed and to be rendered impossible in the future." He added that he had been the object of attacks of sarcasm and calumnies, but declared the sight of such a gathering as that before him was enough to spur him on to new efforts.

In an outburst against his critics, the foreign minister declared he felt the innermost sentiments of the French people a desire that he should continue in office.

50 PRINCES FOIL SCHEME TO BALK INDIA FREEDOM

Disown Rajah's Plan; To Attend London Parley.

BY WILLIAM SHIRER.

[Copyright: 1931: By The Chicago Tribune.]

SIMLA, India, June 14.—With the arrival here tomorrow of the nawab of Bhopal, youngest and ablest of the petty tyrants whom the British government maintains on make believe thrones in the so-called Indian states, the plot of a small group of maharajahs, led by the maharajah of Patiala, to wreck the round table conference is expected to be squelched definitely.

The nawab of Bhopal, who is chancellor of the chamber of princes, will confer with Viceroy Lord Willingdon about the coming negotiations at London. It was learned that he will inform Lord Willingdon that the princes as a group are ready to go to England in September to help draw up the constitution for a self-governing federalized India.

Fifty Princes Agree.

A spokesman for the nawab said tonight that fifty princes have already informed their chancellor that they would support the proposed Indian federation. Among these fifty are the rulers of practically all the important states, including Mysore, Travancore, Cochin, Jaipur, Jodhpur, Gwalior, and Bikaner.

Only the maharajah of Patiala, that modern Medici of India whose inhuman treatment of his million-odd subjects has caused a committee of five leading Indians who investigated the affairs of his state last year publicly to accuse him of everything from incitement to murder to seduction, abduction, medieval tortures, and maintaining forced labor, is opposed to the federal state.

Britons Aid Plot.

He has a handful of minor potentates, many of whose domains are no larger than an American homestead, behind him. Also—and this is no secret here—he is said to be backed, if not put up to the job, by a small group of British officials who are secretly trying to wreck the round table conference in honest belief that they will thus save India for the British empire.

The plot to torpedo the conference came to a head this week when the maharajah of Patiala, who in London last fall, vociferously supported a self-governing Indian federation, announced through die-hard newspapers in London and Calcutta his somersault, declaring that the federation goes too far.

It is significant that only a fortnight ago the king-emperor George V. was pleased to appoint the maharajah of Patiala honorary lieutenant general of the imperial army. Before that the British-Indian government completely whitewashed him of the minister charges which the committee of venerated Indian leaders brought against him last year.

It is whispered, therefore, that the maharajah of Patiala at a proper moment showed his proper appreciation. The Indian Nationalists charge that he did so this week by coming out publicly against the federation.

Political Tension Relieved.

The nawab of Bhopal's assurance that the princes have not gone back on their stand for the federation, regardless of the maharajah of Patiala, considerably relieved political tension today, and his forthcoming talks with the viceroy are expected to clear the situation.

The Indian states people's conference, representing 80,000,000 subjects living under maharajahs, at its closing meeting today adopted resolutions expressing full confidence in Gandhi. This conference also condemned the governments of the princes as "irresponsible and autocratic," denied the right of the maharajahs to represent them at the round table conference, asked for their own representatives at the conference, and called on the league of nations to investigate the system of forced labor, amounting to "virtual slavery," prevalent in many states.

20,000 CHINESE SOLDIERS SLAIN BY COMMUNISTS

Nationalists Admit Chaos in North.

SHANGHAI, June 15.—[Monday.]—(AP)—The Nationalist government admitted today that 20,000 soldiers has been slaughtered or otherwise disposed of by communists bands in Kiangsi, Hunan, and northern Fukien provinces recently.

All semblance of order in those provinces has virtually disappeared, officials said, and Chinese and foreigners alike were attempting to evacuate the district. Some, however, were marooned by the roving bands and unable to leave.

The government said 200,000 troops had been poured into Kiangsi province and a large number into Hunan and Fukien provinces to stop the depredations.

No attempt was made by the government to ascertain the number of peasants killed in the communist movement, which within the last year has reduced the Yangtse valley to virtual chaos, paralyzing trade, reducing people to beggary, and actively opposing the authority of Nanking.

Chiang to Take Field.

Outstanding Nationalist leaders regard the communist menace as the most serious which has yet threatened China's stormy revolutionary movement.

Chiang Kai-Shek, generalissimo of Nationalist forces, who last week announced he would lead the fight against the bandit and Red hordes, said today he expected to leave within three days to personally conduct the campaign. Although not underestimating the difficulty of the task he has undertaken, Chiang said he expected to curb the Reds within three months. The government campaign of the last eight months has met with no great success.

Gen. Chen Ming-shu, ousted governor of Canton, who returned to China last week after fleeing to the security of Japan when the southern insurgent movement became openly hostile to the régime of President Chiang Kai-shek, announced his loyalty to the government. He telegraphed Wang Ching-wei, leader of the Canton rebellion, that he personally was leading his army against the southern capital.

Chen Rejoins Troops.

Chen, when he returned from Japan, rejoined his two divisions of troops in Kiangsi province. In return for payments from both the Nationalist and new insurgent governments, he was supposed to remain neutral, using his army only against bandits in that province. Later, however, he was reported to have sent a representative to Canton. The announcement followed that his troops would defend Swatow, a southern stronghold.

Chen's army was reported at Sinfeng in southern Kiangsi. Southern leaders were taking precautions at Shiuchow lest he take that route to Canton.

Canton leaders probably will not declare war until they are assured of support from the north.

ANARCHIST PLOT SEEN IN DEATH AT BUENOS AIRES

Police Chief Bares Terrorist Plans.

BY HAROLD TATAM.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BUENOS AIRES, June 14. — Police investigations following the assassination of Police Commissioner Maj. Jose Rosasco by five men in a restaurant in the suburb of Avellaneda last Thursday night have revealed that the dead officer paid the penalty for thwarting anarchist activities precisely at the moment he was gathering up the threads of a conspiracy which bore all the characteristics of a mystery novel.

When Maj. Rosasco raided communist centers six months ago he discovered a number of plans of the principal electric power stations in this region. From these he scented a terrorist plot of vast proportions and followed up clues which eventually led to the discovery of a criminal organization with ramifications abroad, apparently designed to sabotage large industrial concerns as well as secure converts among soldiers, especially those engaged in guarding arsenals.

Numerous arrests ordered by Maj. Rosasco apparently disconcerted the anarchists, who destroyed a mass of documents containing the names of their adherents and other important data. Maj. Rosasco, however, succeeded in obtaining many of their documents, which showed the anarchists had been periodically receiving large sums of money from unidentified sources.

noted the resolution of the council adopted on May 23 relating to the submission and distribution of figures, and transmits detailed information in accordance therewith, he has the honor to request that full and immediate distribution and publicity be given to the American figures. The secretary of state entertains the hope that other nations may thus be encouraged to lay their figures before the public without delay. The secretary general may find it convenient to bring this communication to the attention of other interested governments."

While the statistics in general were not new so far as the American public is concerned, they were significant in that for the first time aviation strength figures are included as possible subjects for limitation. The figures also are compiled somewhat differently than heretofore has been the American custom.

Include Everything in Report.

Statistics furnished by the personnel and warships of the American army and navy include virtually everything that could possibly be counted. Over age ships are included although earmarked. Reserve officers are included, on a daily effective basis, in American land strength. The Filipino scouts, officers on caretaking duty, air personnel, all are included. Figures are for the 1930 fiscal year.

Summarized, the total land armed forces of the United States including everything except the National Guard, was given as 139,957 men and 13,080 officers. The naval force, including marines, was listed as 109,886 enlisted men and 10,430 officers. The total air force personnel, including army and navy, was given as 27,324. The air figures are included in the totals for land and naval forces above.

The fleet strength, including over age ships, was listed as 1,251,340 tons. In addition the tables showed 776,085 tons in exempt vessels, not included as combatant vessels, 38,050 tons in special vessels and 26,000 tons in the battleship Wyoming, a training vessel under the terms of the London treaty. Air strength was given as 965 army, and 787 navy planes of a total horse power of 1,028,745.

Convert Reserve into Effectives.

American land and naval reserves are counted in the above totals on a basis of number of days of training served by each man. Thus, a total of 22,393 reserve officers, each serving 17½ hours per officer, are converted into 1,075 daily effectives serving 365 days a year.

Converted into the daily effectives the American reserve strength was listed as follows:

1. Twenty-two thousand three hundred and ninety-three army reserve officers training 17½ days per officer converted into 1,075 average daily effectives.

2. A naval and marine corps reserve of 1,402 average daily effectives, 223 officers.

In addition, the report stated that while the National Guard was not included in the totals because it is not available to the national government without measures of mobilization, guard training in 1930 would amount to 10,774 effectives.

Conference Sets Procedure.

The procedure followed by Mr. Stimson in handling the armament figures was the outcome of a series of conferences between the secretary of state, Hugh Gibson, American ambassador to Belgium, who is expected to head the American delegation to Geneva; Charles G. Dawes, American ambassador to Great Britain, and Senator Dwight W. Morrow [Rep., N. J.], one of the delegates to the London naval conference in 1930. Ambassadors Gibson and Dawes shortly will return to their posts. Secretary Stimson will confer this summer on the armament problem with the foreign secretaries of Great Britain, France, Italy, Japan and Germany.

By the time the assembly of the league holds its annual meeting in September Secretary Stimson will have concluded his conversations abroad. On the basis of developments this summer the assembly will decide whether it would be advisable to postpone the conference for a matter of months, as now thought advisable by some American diplomats.

"GOOD TIME CHARLIEGRAMS"

What Is a Good Time Charliegram?

A Good Time Charliegram is a sentence of exactly ten words which conveys a timely message of good cheer or sound advice: "Every time you buy something you help bring back prosperity." "The time to stock up is when prices are low." "Large savings can be made on nearly everything bought today." "When business starts humming prices are bound to rise again."

RULING MAY AID CITY'S FIGHT FOR ELECTRIFICATION

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., June 14.—[Special.]—In its fight to win the railroads over to electrification and to bring about a consolidated terminal program which would free the south side of the loop of the present obstructing depots and yards, Chicago may have been given a new weapon by a decision handed down by the United States Supreme court shortly before its recent adjournment.

The suit instituted by THE TRIBUNE asking that the Illinois commerce commission order the railroads entering Chicago to electrify within the city is pending. And the bill introduced by State Representative Harris D. Gilbert of Chicago to compel all roads within the city limits to electrify by 1935 is still hanging fire in the Illinois assembly.

Substance of Decision.

The substance of the Supreme court decision, May 18, in the suit of the Santa Fe, Southern Pacific, and Salt Lake lines against the California railroad commission is that a state or a designated commission has the inherent power to compel railroads to build a union terminal in a designated area and to readjust their trackage to fit the terminal plan.

The suit came to the federal Supreme court, after fifteen years of litigation, on an appeal by the railroads from a California Supreme court decision upholding the right of the state commission to orders the roads to join in erecting and using a $10,000,000 terminal in the "plaza area" of Los Angeles.

Hughes Delivers Opinion.

In its opinion, which was delivered by Chief Justice Hughes, the United States Supreme court found that a state commission, exercising such powers as are held in Illinois by the state commerce commission, rather than the interstate commerce commission, has the right to require the construction of a union terminal, but that a certificate of public convenience and necessity must first be issued by the interstate commerce commission before the state commission can act.

"The railway companies," said Chief Justice Hughes, "contend that the order of the state commission is repugnant to the commerce clause and is in conflict with the powers vested by congress in the interstate commerce commission. The argument is that as to union terminal facilities, joint use of tracks and abandonment of lines, the congress has occupied the field and that state authority has been abrogated.

Disagree with Railroads.

"The contention presupposes that state authority could be exerted were it not for the provisions of the federal legislation. That is, that it was the intention of congress to prevent the exercise of state power in this matter of serious public interest although no authority was given to the federal commission to meet the public need. Such an intention to override existing state authority to deal with local exigencies is not to be imputed to the congress unless its enactment compels that conclusion."

The court disagreed with the argument of the railroads that certificates which had been issued by the interstate commerce commission in the Los Angeles terminal case were invalid because they had been issued in proceedings instituted by the railroads' adversaries and over the roads' protest.

Reply to Question.

Then the opinion went on to dispose of the broad question of whether the state commission's order deprived the roads of their property without due process of law and denied them the equal protection of the laws, in violation of the fourteenth amendment. Such a contention has been the railroads' principal recourse in their opposition to Chicago's wish to regulate them in the interests of the people of Chicago.

"The principle that the state, directly or through an authorized commission, may require railroad companies to provide reasonably adequate and suitable facilities for the convenience of the communities served by them, has frequently been applied," said the opinion. "Railroad carriers may be compelled by state legislation to establish stations at proper places for the convenience of their patrons."

the figures just released by the census bureau, less than 7 per cent of the population of Chicago. Moreover, the income of Negroes, generally speaking, is lower than that of other racial groups, and their security of employment is probably less than that of the rest of the population. The risk of vacancies and of tenants unable to meet their rent was correspondingly great.

Nor were these the only respects, according to Mr. Stern, in which the deck was packed against the success of the experiment. The site purchased for the apartments was boulevard property. The apartments have been erected on the block extending on Michigan boulevard from 46th to 47th street and reaching back to Wabash avenue. Less expensive sites, as favorably placed with relation to transportation and schools, might have been acquired, but it was Mr. Rosenwald's purpose to see what could be done under circumstances which no man could say were unduly favorable.

Didn't Know the Odds.

"Frankly," said Mr. Stern, in going over the balance sheet with a TRIBUNE reporter, "we did not foresee how heavy the odds were against us. We did not know at the time we let our contracts in 1928 that we were going to put up our buildings at the very peak of high costs in the building industry. The last units of the building were completed in October, 1929, just a month before the market broke. There is no room to doubt that if we were building today we could cut at least 15 per cent from our costs, and probably more. Nevertheless, we have not written down our investment to accord with contemporary costs, and we are still able to show a moderate return."

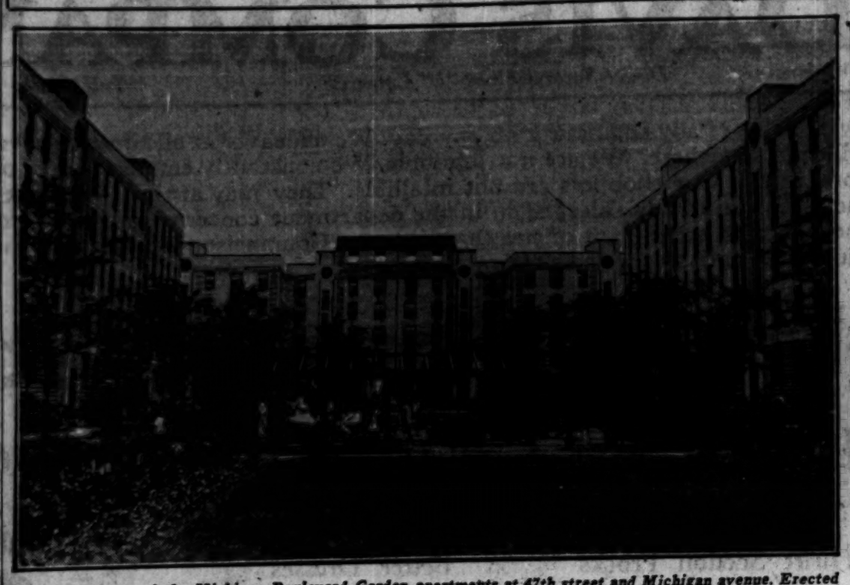
The accounts for the year ending Dec. 31, 1930, show a total book value of the property, including land, building, and equipment, of $2,598,562 after normal depreciation. The property was mortgaged for $1,000,000 at 5½ per cent and the mortgage has been reduced by $50,000. The gross income from rentals was $343,992. After all expenses, including interest payments and reserves for taxes and depreciation, the net income was $33,873, amounting to 5.59 per cent on the common stock equity of $1,500,000.

Taxes More Than Expected.

"Considering the general condition of real estate investments, we regard this as a fairly satisfactory showing," said Mr. Stern. "There is only one fly in the ointment. The estimate of what our local taxation would be, given us by experienced real estate men, proved to be only half as high as the taxes actually billed against the property. The matter is now being reconsidered by the assessors. If the assessment stands the earnings on the equity will be reduced to something like 4 per cent, perhaps too small a return to invite further undertakings along this line."

There are, in all, 421 apartments in the Rosenwald project. The buildings cover only 37 per cent of the block and are constructed around a central garden which has the proportions of a small park. The smallest apartment is of three rooms and the largest five. All of them have outside light either on the street or on landscaped gardens wider than Michigan boulevard. They are all equipped with modern plumbing and mechanical refrigeration and such luxuries as parquet floors. The average monthly rental was $62.27. Despite the business depression the occupancy was 97.62 per cent.

ROSENWALD VENTURE POINTS TO BETTER HOUSING AS WAY TO PROSPERITY



Courtway of the Michigan Boulevard Garden apartments at 47th street and Michigan avenue. Erected by Julius Rosenwald as an experiment they have proved to be profit making. The success of his experiment is taken as an indication that similar investments would pay and at the same time afford employment to thousands.

12 REDS SEIZED FOR DISTURBING NEGRO MEETING

Eleven men and a woman, alleged communists, were arrested yesterday for creating a disturbance at the Wendell Phillips High school, where Congressman Oscar De Priest was addressing a meeting, under the auspices of the Association for the Advancement of Colored People, attended by about 1,800 Negroes.

It was charged that the communists distributed literature and attempted to prevent the congressman from speaking. The woman arrested is Nina Rybott, 46 years old, 1201 East Marquette road. Ten of the men were colored and one white. After the disturbers had been removed police from the Stanton avenue station remained to see there was no further disorder.

BLAST IN TUNNEL INJURES 4; TWO MAY LOSE SIGHT

Two men face the loss of their eyesight today as the result of a tunnel blast late Saturday at 63d street and Cicero avenue which also injured two other men.

The injured, all in the Holy Cross hospital, are Manu O'Donnell, 36 years old, 57 West Huron street; Henry Hasit, 32, of Riverside; John Farra, 36, of 725 West 138th street, and Sam Ramovich, 43, of 685 Milwaukee avenue. Those whose sight is imperiled are O'Donnell and Hasit. Farra and Ramovich suffered cuts and burns.

The men were working in the tunnel, about 20 feet below Cicero avenue, and north of 63d street, when a carbide lamp used for illuminating purposes, exploded. Fellow workmen took the four to the Chicago airport where they were treated by Dr. Robert F. Fenwick, and then taken to the hospital.

New Biography of Aaron Burr Raps Hamilton

Depicts Latter as Villain of Famous Duel.

BY EDITH WEIGLE.

"AARON BURR," by Johnston D. Kerkhoff [Greenberg], is guaranteed not to give the reader a headache. It is a quaint, novelized account of the life of the man who shot Alexander Hamilton and thus wrote his name indelibly on the pages of American history.

JOHNSTON D. KERKHOFF. (Drawn by Hogue.)

Mr. Kerkhoff makes Burr a romantic, glamorous figure, fascinating even in defeat. As a boy of 16 he was embarked on his life long avocation, that of intriguing the ladies. True, his first adventure met with defeat. On the eve of his elopement with an attractive young girl of Elizabethtown [history does not disclose her name] Burr was unceremoniously dumped in a muddy river by her irate father and brothers, while his fiancée was taken back hastily to the parental roof. Aaron was left "to share his wedding night with the jeering bullfrogs."

In spite of this unfortunate beginning, however, the man became an incorrigible flirt. A pretty face never escaped his roving eyes. Susceptible to the gentler sex, it was equally attracted to Aaron. Until the day of his death he never wanted for flirtations or the amiable ministrations of women.

It was strange, therefore, that he should marry a widow ten years his senior and the mother of five children. Theodosia Prevost is pictured as "delicate in body, delicate in manners and grace," but of remarkable intellect. She could discuss Chesterfield, Voltaire and Rousseau with her handsome young suitor and, though never a beauty, she was "the one woman who held him until death." He had affairs with many others after she died, but according to this biography, no one ever really took her place in his heart.

The author also makes Burr hot headed, impetuous, egotistical, a man used to the center of the stage and able to hold the position because of his charm and wit. He was not awed by Gen. Washington and openly disagreed with him. Jefferson was his friend, but only one of many, whose names were representative of their communities all over the country.

When Burr made a trip to New Orleans it was like a royal procession of Queen Elizabeth when she went to visit one of her subjects. He trod on roses. Every door was open to him.

The author traces the steps in the growing feud between Alexander Hamilton and Burr. After the states ratified the constitution [Hamilton using his influence to get New York in line] and Washington was made President, the post of secretary of the treasury was given to Hamilton. Burr, only 31, was named attorney general of New York and then defeated Gen. Philip Schuyler for the United States senate.

This started the enmity between Hamilton and Burr, for Schuyler was Hamilton's father-in-law. "From that day Hamilton was his [Burr's] enemy, an enemy who dined at Burr's table, drank his wine, and went out to defame him with the slyness that only a brilliant man knows."

Tradition is given a turn about face in this biography, for Hamilton, instead of Burr, is made out the rogue and the villain. On the eve of the duel it was Hamilton who wrote a guilty letter that would indict his enemy, were he victor. This document read that Hamilton planned, "If it please God to give me the opportunity to reserve and throw away my first fire, and I have thoughts even of reserving my second fire, and thus giving a double opportunity to Col. Burr to pause and to reflect."

It is this belief, never actually proved, that Hamilton shot into the air, that made people cry "Murder, murder." Had he been victor no word would have been spoken, but dead he was the victim of a crime. There is much food for thought in this possible aspect of the duel.

Burr, a man of strong feeling, had an outstanding emotion in his life, his devotion to his daughter, Theodosia. His affection for her was transparent, equaled only by Theodosia's love for him.

The most dramatic part of the book is toward the end, when Burr, an outcast, a wanderer from country to country, alone and forlorn, is seen standing at the Battery, watching in the freezing wind for the boat that was to bring Theodosia to him, and that never arrived. He was, at last, forced to give her up for dead, "but as winter melted into spring and the heat of summer settled down over the city, scores of men and women strolling to the Battery to gossip and flirt with cool winds fanned them, stared curiously at the little man who seemed content to be gazing seaward."

Good morning!

Every day, in every way, I like Paul Lukas better and better. [Seems to me I made the remark before, which doesn't make any difference, because it still goes.]

There's not a more finished actor on the screen than Mr. Lukas, nor is there one who gives himself more wholly and sincerely to each rôle, be it featured or subsidiary. Add to this ability and conscientiousness the undeniable fact that he is exceedingly good looking and it's easy to understand how, in a short year, he has leaped from unimportant cast member to featured player.

In "The Vice Squad" he comes mighty near being the whole show. He turns a rôle that could easily have been a cheaply melodramatic one into a searching study of a Man. As a gentleman, who, through circumstance, falls to the level of stool pigeon for a police "vice squad," headed by an unscrupulous sergeant, he is just that—a gentleman who becomes a thing he loathes.

What a moment that is when he says to the bestial sergeant:

"I must live with myself! I must look at myself in the glass—every day . . ."

Mr. Lukas plays Stephen Lucarno without heroics. Nail-biting and paroxysms of sorrow and repentance are absent from his portrayal. You see corroding contempt; silent despair; numb acquiescence to the inevitable—until the strain becomes too much. Then, quiet determination to do a thing he is prevented from achieving by one to whom he had been 'rind—and who has recognized gold where gold is.

Stephen's return to and acceptance by his kind; his turning away again—and the outcome of it all—are engrossingly pictured.

Mr. Lukas has been most fortunate in his director and supporting cast. Their splendid assistance has helped him make a picture to be remembered from a ten, twent', thirt' story.

Galveston, Tex., June 14.—(AP)—That portion of the world interested in "certified" beauties prefers a blond blue eyed young woman weighing about 119 pounds.

This fact was well demonstrated here today in a parade of thirty-six bathing girls from all parts of the United States and eight foreign nations.

Sans the aid of rouge, the contestants in the twelfth international pageant of beauty rode in individual floats along the Seawall boulevard. The young women were not required to enter the water.

Blonds predominate heavily in the contest, which will close Tuesday night with the selection of winners.

Thirteen of the entrants today were favored for honors after the management announced they "most symbolized our ideals of grace and beauty."

BEG YOUR PARDON

In THE TRIBUNE of last Saturday it was stated that Miss Billie Smith, 19 years old, reported kidnaped from Waukegan, had been found in De Forest Jayne's riding academy, near Diamond lake, and that one man had been arrested at the stables. Mr. Jayne declares that Miss Smith had been employed by himself and his wife as a housemaid Thursday afternoon. She applied voluntarily for the position, he says. Mr. Jayne also asserts that no one was arrested in the stables or grounds of the academy.

Movie Gossip from Hollywood

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Hollywood, Cal., June 14.—Jackie Cooper, encountered on a studio set, was talking with the disgusted tones common to the eminence of eight years of age about "growing up to being a movie actor." Jackie's ire was roused by one of those marceled Little Lord Fauntleroy boys who are so common out here in kid parts in pictures. "Do you know what he asked me?" Jackie queried. "He said, 'Was that a real tomawto you threw at Jackie Searle in Skippy?' I said, 'No, that was a real tomayto.'"

"I pretty near strained a tonsil singing 'That's You, Baby' in the 'Fox Movietone Follies,'" Jackie protested. All in all, this lad had decided thumbs down on the movies as a grownup profession, but thinks it might be pretty nice to be "a street car conductor with all those nickels banging against your stomach."

Jackie Cooper's new three year contract with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer guarantees him 40 weeks' work out of each 52, at $1,300 a week, with yearly options which if taken up by the studio will pay him $2,000 a week the third year, $2,500 the fourth, and $3,000 the fifth. Jackie got $4,000 cash as a bonus for having his unexpired contract with Hal Roach made over to and superseded by MGM.

It is reported here that the price paid John Drinkwater for writing his biography of Carl Laemmle was $25,000.

Sylvania Sidney, Clara Bow's substitute at Paramount, injured her left ankle in an automobile accident and was compelled to stay home with her foot in a cast a couple of days, but is now around and about.

C. Graham Baker, who six months ago was in complete charge at the First National studios as chief executive, is today one of the casualties in the tremendous entrenchment shakeup of the Warner-First National combination. Baker has resigned, his resignation effective today. He's going to spend part of the summer vacationing in Canada on the fruits of the big salary which better days in pictures paid him.

Eric von Stroheim is going to have another chance to direct a picture at the R. K. O. lot, although for two years it looked as though Eric never would get another picture to make on that particular lot. "Queen Kelly," the financially disastrous film which Von directed for Gloria Swanson, and which finally was shelved, was made on the R. K. O. lot, and its persistent bickerings, tinkerings, changes of cast, story, and direction, unmade Von Stroheim as a director, temporarily, and were followed by the film exit of Joseph P. Kennedy, Boston banker and Gloria's financial backer.

Science Offers Own Cabaret for Delegates

Electrons to Dance; Sun to Throw Flames.

Pasadena, Cal., June 14.—(AP)—The man who thinks there is nothing new under the sun will be astounded if he comes to Pasadena this week.

Not only under the sun figuratively, but literally beneath the sun, within the sun and beyond the sun new astounding things, a mass of them, will be viewed or discussed by more than a thousand scientists in the summer session of the American Association for Advancement of Science.

The mad dance of the electrons; the million mile fire tongues of the sun; the thousands of universes moving at speeds up to twelve thousand miles a second; what causes earthquakes; the antiquity of man; and some five hundred other fascinating subjects embracing virtually all fields of science are found in the program.

Be it botany, zoology, or meteorology, geology, astronomy or geography; ornithology; bacteriology, anthropology, physics, chemistry—in fact, no matter what science—one is almost sure to find an interpreter of new developments.

Twenty-two specialized scientific societies will hold joint sessions with the American association starting tomorrow and extending through the week. The meeting grounds are the scenes of scientific research that attracted Albert Einstein for two months this year.

The greatest astronomical laboratory and observatory in the world, the Mount Wilson observatory of the Carnegie institution of Washington, D. C., will house some of the sessions. Others will be held at the California Institute of Technology, the Southwest museum, and the Huntington library.

In addition to the reading of 500 papers in the various sessions, a wide variety of demonstrations, experimental tests, and exhibits will be held. For the benefit of the public five popular evening lectures will be held during the week.

BRITISH CHURCH GROUP MAY PUT RUSSIAN 'WAR' UP TO LEAGUE

LONDON, June 14.—The Church assembly, composed of the archbishops and bishops, proctors for the clergy and representatives for the laity of the Church of England, which meets in London tomorrow, is to be petitioned to get the league of nations to investigate allegations of soviet persecution of religion in Russia.

This is the first petition of any sort ever presented to the assembly in its ten years' existence and it is signed in behalf of the Christian Protestant movement by Prebendary A. W. Gough of St. Paul's cathedral.

The petition, which will be presented by the Rev. C. E. Douglas as proctor for the clergy of the Southwark diocese, declares the protest of Christendom against the persecution in Russia of those who believe in God, whether they are Christians, Jews or Mohammedans, has been publicly indorsed by the leaders of every Christian church throughout the world, and urges the assembly to record as its opinion that "it is the primary duty of the league of nations to investigate any statements, anywhere, at any time and among any people, alleging that freedom of conscience is not fully allowed, and to give formal judgment concerning such accusations."

The petitioners submit that by this means only can the "nations forming the league hope to command general confidence in its justice and integrity."

Loyola Medical Dean Knighted by Cardinal; Ceremony Yesterday

Cardinal Mundelein officiated yesterday at services at Our Lady of Sorrows church, 3121 West Jackson boulevard, when the order of a Knight of St. Gregory the Great was conferred on Dr. L. D. Moorhead, dean of the medical school of Loyola university. The honor was given in recognition of Dr. Moorhead's services to medical institutions of the archdiocese.

A procession from the Servite monastery near by to the church preceded the exercises. The papal bull authorizing the investiture was read in the original Latin and then in English, after which Dr. Moorhead received the order from the hands of the cardinal. Solemn benediction of the blessed sacrament concluded the services.

Diplomas Today; U. of C. Exercises Tomorrow.

Patten gymnasium on the Evanston campus of Northwestern university will be the scene this morning of the graduation of the largest class in the history of Chicago as 1,530 students receive degrees from the graduate and undergraduate schools. President Walter Dill Scott will preside.

This seventy-third annual commencement program will be marked, it has been announced, by the award of several honorary degrees by the institution, but the recipients have not been revealed in advance. The exercises will begin at 10:30 o'clock. Rufus Dawes, president of the World's Fair of 1933, will give the address, and the Rt. Rev. George Craig Stewart, bishop of the Episcopal diocese of Chicago, will deliver the invocation.

Yesterday afternoon Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes, Methodist Episcopal bishop of Chicago, was the main speaker at the baccalaureate services in the gymnasium. Last night the senior class was in charge of the candlelight service of song, in the same building, attended by members of other classes and the general public.

Tomorrow morning on the Midway campus the University of Chicago will begin the distribution of degrees to 879 candidates in its undergraduate and advanced schools. Degrees will be awarded at 11 o'clock in the morning to members of the graduate and professional schools. In the afternoon at 3 o'clock the college of liberal arts will confer its bachelor degrees.

Dr. Charles W. Gilkey, dean of the university chapel, yesterday conducted convocation Sunday services in the chapel for the graduates.

Tomorrow evening at the Congress hotel the Law School association and the Rush Medical association will hold reunions, and the Rush class of 1881 will celebrate the golden jubilee of its graduation with a special dinner. All the table accessories at the fifty year festivities will be of the Victorian era, including bone napkin rings, a revolving castor with its mustard and other condiment receptacles, and a red checkered tablecloth.

Dr. Albert Maurer, in charge of the program, regards the prize pieces of the collection as the mustache cups, gathered after diligent effort.

Miss Jane Addams of Hull House returns to Rockford college today to be the principal guest at the 84th commencement of her alma mater, to be the speaker of the occasion, and to celebrate the anniversary of her graduation half a century ago.

Orphans' Home Festival.

The annual spring festival of the Norwegian Lutheran Children's home was held yesterday on the grounds of the institution in Edison Park. More than 2,000 persons, including hundreds of children from various Lutheran church Sunday schools, attended. Judge Francis B. Allegretti was principal speaker.

THE STAGE

FOR thousands of years the theater—any theater, in any land—has been selling its tickets through a small hole in a wall leading into a cell that contained a tired young man who occasionally went loco from nerve strain and glowered fiendishly at the customers. All of the so-called genius that has been lavished upon "show business," from Thespis down to Belasco, has never suggested an improvement upon this cave dweller technique.

But the reformation is at hand. Earl Carroll, who has been building himself a new 3,000 seat theater in New York, announces that he intends to abolish the box office. This great step forward will take place Aug. 27, when Mr. Carroll unveils his latest "Vanities" and dedicates his temple of entertainment. He says:

"All ticket purchases will be made over an open counter. There will be no metal grill or glass window behind which the ordinary treasurer takes refuge after hurling surly retorts at insistent patrons. Also, the tickets for the current performance will be within full view of the customers. The five treasurers on duty at the counter will be undisturbed by telephone calls and orders. The specially built ticket rack will be the same in the back as the front. The tickets extend through both sides; and a force of clerks behind the rack will attend to telephone requests."

Aug. 27, 1931, is, therefore, the date when the theater will break away from its gypsy inheritance. There should be some kind of a celebration of this birth of a new idea.

Four titles were erased from the Broadway list of playbills last Saturday night. They were "Melo." "The Vinegar Tree," "The House Beautiful," and "The Gondoliers." "Melo" is expected to reopen in August. "The Vinegar Tree" and "The House Beautiful" will visit Chicago next September.

A new "Ziegfeld Follies"—the first in several years—will be born in the Nixon theater, Pittsburgh, tonight. Mr. Ziegfeld and his retinue of authors and advisers will be in attendance, prepared to shear the show into shape for its Broadway première, which is scheduled for June 23. Helen Morgan, late of "Sweet Adeline," and Harry Richman of last winter's "Sons O' Guns," lead the list of entertainers.

George White, another master of Broadway revues, will wait until August to launch his next "Scandals." The well known Howard brothers, Willie and Eugene, will participate.

The London stage censor, who goes by the title of lord chamberlain, thinks that the "flaming youth" theme is being overdone by American playwrights. He has refused to pass Elmer Harris' "A Modern Virgin" for acting in London unless certain changes were made in the manuscript.

Upon receipt of the news, Mr. Harris, whose play is now in performance in New York, became slightly petulant. He said:

"The changes suggested would destroy all coherence and clarity in the plot. I cannot submit to the charge that the portions of the play condemned by the lord chamberlain are 'unfit for English audiences.'"

So it appears that London will not see "A Modern Virgin." It escaped the same Mr. Harris' "Young Sinners" under similar circumstances.

Ellen Van Volkenburg, colleague of Maurice Browne during the period of the Chicago Little theater [1912-1918], will return to the scene of her stage novitiate tomorrow. She will spend a day in Chicago, en route to Seattle, where she will spend the summer as head of the dramatic department of the Cornish school. She has just completed her first season as head of the London Theater company, one of Maurice Browne's enterprises.

"Grand Hotel" will probably come to Chicago immediately after the termination of its New York run. Its management thinks, however, that this will not happen until next January.

Political Fights Provide German Youths' Thrills

Recruiting Grounds for Clashing Parties.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, June 14.—Ruthlessly, German grownups are instilling political hatred into the minds of their children, proletarians vying with once respectably rich families for the glory of having the most class conscious youngsters.

The goody-goody child, once the ideal of Germans, has been replaced by the young roughneck "with political convictions drilled into him."

This writer confesses to a distinct predilection for young roughnecks; their pranks denote pep, imagination, but the poor "Deutsche" youngsters are becoming roughnecks with a vengeance; snarling discipline which made the goody-goody in the old school days, today teaches them venomous hatred. After the defeat of 1871 the French teacher did the same—he instilled thirst for revenge from 1871 until 1914—I know since I spent several years in French schools—but he did it subtly, with an emphasis on spiritual values. The German teachers and parents I have watched teach class hatred of Germans for Germans with a spice of world revolution for the communist children, revenge for the world war for the Fascist children.

School excursions to the surroundings of Berlin are numerous. "We are storm troop 20," I heard thirty husky boys of well fed middle and upper class families yell as they rushed a train in the suburb of Erkner, on their way back home from an excursion.

"Let's massacre these dastardly proletarians—knives out!" and they swooped on, nearly knocking down passengers waiting for their train. The train attendant rushed to pull open the doors for them to get them into compartments as quick as possible—there they'd be among themselves, and political bedlam could continue, punctuated with the raucous commands of the teacher, which they obeyed with machinelike precision.

Scarcely had the anti-proletarian boys been packed away when in marched bare legged, poorly clad younger ones, sporting red flags "Clear the way for us—we the future victors—world revolution is coming," their slogan, as they stormed compartments at the other end of the train to which the train attendants hustled them dexterously.

Group one was ready to hop out and engage in battle with group two but here the teachers remembered their duty, restrained both groups and the train pulled out with a Fascist bunch in front and a communist one in the rear cars.

Reasons for all this are not far to seek. These phenomena of immature violence and hatred of adolescents for adolescents—and fellow countrymen—are conditioned by bitter realities of the time and by shrewd, practical calculations of party leaders. Once past the 20th birthday, boys and girls alike are voters. Get hold of them young, coach them thoroughly, and they will stick with the party, cast their votes for its representatives, scramble in its street demonstrations, and break windows or club the opposition whenever opportunity offers.

A 20 year old voter counts just as much as one over 50 years old; will last longer, according to all reasonable expectations.

One of the most striking illustrations of this interest of the young in politics was revealed by the German Institute of Newspaper Science, headed by Prof. Emil Dovifat of the University of Berlin faculty. It has under way a piece of practical research work which is likely to prove in actual figures the unprecedented absorption of youth here in problems of government and national policy. A questionnaire was sent out at the beginning of the year to 100,000 youngsters asking how many newspapers they read, and what portions.

From 2,000 students of higher Berlin schools [ages 12-18] results have already been tabulated. Out of this total hardly more than two dozen read no newspapers. On the other hand more than three-fourths are regular readers. Most of these, naturally, read their parents' newspapers, but more than 400 read newspapers of various political complexions to get a general view of the situation.

Politics was the favorite reading of the majority. Sport took only second place—that is, with the boys. The girls preferred sports.

Third place with the boys was given to news of a technical nature, then accidents, etc. Serialized novels, whether romances or thrillers, only got tenth place.

It is worthy of note that of the students who took advantage of the opportunity to make critical comments in the questionnaire, most objected to one sided political propaganda.

New Buildings for University Within London

BY JOHN STEELE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, June 14.—Dominated by a huge tower and set in courts and gardens, work is to begin next year on a great new university for London. The university will consist of about 15 buildings, harmoniously set next to the British museum and costing approximately $15,000,000.

Work is to begin shortly after the selection of an architect—the entire job is to be given to one architect—and it is expected to take from 20 to 30 years to complete.

Six buildings are planned to constitute the first section of the construction. They will be the administrative block, university library, university hall, institute of historical research, officers' training corps premises, and Courtauld institute of art.

Included in the second stage of the building operations are tentatively planned the university union, Birkbeck college, the school of oriental studies, the school of Slavonic studies, and the London day training college, and the third stage of construction will include a faculty club, university chambers for the junior staff and residential accommodations for students.

The tower is visualized in such a position and of such a character that it will dominate the other buildings on and surrounding the site. The university hall, one of the main features of the group, will probably be semi-circular to permit the presentation of theatrical performances, and is planned to seat 2,500.

Special attention will be given to internal planning, lighting, heating and ventilation to insure quiet and convenience throughout. A garden is to be retained in the middle of the site.

The university authorities are at present in possession of only a part of the funds necessary to complete this huge plan, but it will be started nevertheless, and the generosity of future donors will determine the speed with which the entire plan is executed. Courtauld institute is one of

Three Day Yankee Music Festival for Germany, July 6-8

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, June 14.—Vindication of American music, that is the goal of Bad Homburg, the first town in Europe to devote three days of its annual festival to American music. This first festival of American music will be held on July 6, 7, and 8, and music lovers from all parts of the world are prepared to flock to Homburg, one of the most famous of all the great spas of Germany.

To Irving Schwerke, music and dramatic critic of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE'S Paris edition, was delegated the task of selecting and arranging the American programs.

The first day will open with a lecture by Mr. Schwerke on the early history of American music, followed by songs of colonial and modern composers, sung by Miss Mignon Nevada, American operatic and concert vocalist.

For the second day Dr. Oscar Holger, the well known artistic director, will lead the Homburg Radio orchestra in a program of seven symphonic works by American composers [all American born, incidentally]. The program opens and closes with works of Chicagoans. The overture, "Comes Autumn Time," by Leo Sowerby, will be heard first, and "Adventures in a Perambulator," by John Alden Carpenter, will round off the picture of American music.

The final day [July 8] the Lenzewski String quartet and the American pianist, Frank Mannheimer, will perform American chamber music, including Leo Sowerby's "Florida Suite."

Mr. Schwerke has titled his quartet of essays, which will appear in the special program booklet, "Introduction to a Festival of American Music," "Pioneer American Composers, 1679-1800," "American Composers of the 19th Century," and "American Composers of the Present—1900-1931."

POLISH ART CLUB'S CONCERT INCLUDES 2 OF RAVINIA'S SINGERS

The annual concert by the Polish Arts club was held yesterday afternoon at the Illinois Women's Athletic club. The program was given by a number of prominent Polish-American musicians, among them Alice Baran, Wanda Paul, and Adeline Preyss, pianists; S. Kowalska McGinn and Janina Loboda, singers, and Anthony Beck and Michael Wilkomirski, violinists. Among the guests of honor were Consul General Zbyszewski and Vice Consul Kalenski of the Polish consulate, Ina Bourskaya and Marek Windheim of the Ravinia Opera company, Andre Skalski, Albert Pick, and Wesley La Violette.

Cave Thompson, who has the misfortune of being blind and the asset of being a studious pianist with attainments, gave his annual recital yesterday afternoon at the Playhouse. His program consisted of the Beethoven sonata, op. 27, No. 2, sometimes known as the "Moonlight," the Schumann "Carnaval," a group of five pieces by Chopin, on the Schubert Impromptus, and an etude and a Hungarian rhapsody by Liszt. Thousands Recall March by George Rogers Clark, 1778

The ceremony was under the auspices of the local chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution. Other D. A. R. chapters throughout southern Illinois sent representatives.

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS

"How to Gain Obedience," one of a new series of booklets for parents, will be sent by Mrs. Bevans on receipt of a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Children do not necessarily drop off to sleep the minute they go to bed. Mothers and nurses often expect this and feel that something is awry if it does not happen. They should not feel so.

Children vary a great deal in this respect. One child may be a sleepy-head, and sleep easily and long. Another child of different makeup may sleep less all through his childhood and also take longer to drop off to sleep. We must make allowances for that and not expect our child to follow any set table of hours.

Then, there is another variation that we see. There is the variation in an individual child's sleeping habits from time to time. At some periods in his life a child will take a long while to go to sleep; at other times he will go to sleep the minute his head touches the pillow. At some times he will sleep until a reasonable hour, or if he is a school child will sleep past his school hour. While at other times he will have a spell of waking up at 4:30 or 5:30 or 6 and staying awake—which if he is young enough to need your attention will do dire things to the energy and freshness a mother needs for her busy day.

Usually, however, you'll find these times of less sleep or irregularity in sleeping habits do not last. Just as children pass through phases of behavior, so they pass through physical phases and we should not worry too much about some of these variations in sleep and appetite for food. This does not mean that we should discontinue safeguarding their night and daytime sleep. But it does mean we must not expect perfect uniformity in physical habits.

Tomorrow's article will contain practical suggestions in regard to sleeping irregularities.

Memorial Service for Musicians at Rev. Tucker's Church

Annual memorial services for American musicians were held yesterday afternoon at "The church at the end of the road," 2533 North Albany avenue. This church, formally known as St. Stephen's Episcopal, under the leadership of the Rev. Irwin St. John Tucker, has become widely known for its sponsorship of the arts.

A stained glass window, which had been executed in one evening by members of the artists' guild of Chicago, was unveiled and dedicated. The creation of the window is regarded as one of the most unusual feats ever performed in the art glass industry. A monumental "head" of music, the gift of Albin Polasek, was placed in the sanctuary of the church.

THE CLICK OF THE GATE

By Alice Campbell

SYNOPSIS.

Clare, 13 year old daughter of Iris de Bertincourt, disappears mysteriously. Iris has been married for years from her husband, Marcel, a man of great charm but no moral sense. They are cousins and the possible heirs of their tyrannical aunt, the Comtesse de Bellefeuvres.

She planned to divorce Marcel and marry Maj. Alan Charnwood. Charnwood and his friend, Tommy Rostetter, conduct a private search for Clare.

Iris comes to her aunt's home and learns that her husband is already domiciled there. He seems to have reformed. Alan meets Marcel and recalls having seen him at Le Touquet drinking with a coarse looking couple. That night Alan sees Marcel with Suzanne Mely, an actress.

A letter is sent to Iris, stating that Clare is being held for ransom. Her aunt offers to pay the sum asked if Marcel and Iris promise to become reconciled. Marcel calls on Alan. That night an attempt is made to asphyxiate Alan. He moves to Tommy's apartment.

Flowers sent flowers to Iris the night Clare vanished. From Iris' description of the man who delivered them Alan recognizes him as De Bertincourt's companion in Le Touquet. Marcel, who is known to be heavily in debt, is suspected as the instigator of the kidnaping, with the couple, known as Yetta and Pietro, his partners in crime, the motive being the ransom. Alan and Tommy make an unsuccessful search for the couple, but learn that they have a half-witted son. Tommy sees Marcel leaving Suzanne Marly's home at the hour scheduled for him to deliver the ransom. Alan calls on Iris and learns Marcel has not returned home.

INSTALLMENT XLIX.

RANSOM ROBBERY.

"We'll wait till one o'clock," Charnwood said, glancing at his watch. "If neither Clare nor your husband has returned by then I shall insist on placing all our information in the hands of the police!"

Iris regarded him steadily and gave a faint nod. "Yes. It is the only thing left for us to do."

The slow minutes dragged by. Their former shared vigil had been a nerve racking ordeal, but this one was even worse. Their eyes continually darted to the narrow window giving on the court, but only rarely was any word spoken. Iris, who had withdrawn into a hinterland of spirit where no sympathy could reach her, remained in the same conventional attitude, her still hands gleaming transparently white against the black of her dress. Charnwood, watching her, foresaw an impending collapse, one of those complete cataclysms which leave the victim aged and broken. Already the very springs of life seemed dried up at its source.

Then, when she left him to visit her stricken aunt, he went to the window. In the doorway of the loge stood the concierge, gazing expectantly up the street, his sharp eyed wife peering over his shoulder. The whole atmosphere was surcharged, suggesting the prelude to a storm.

Iris' voice roused him. She had come in so quietly he had not noticed her.

"I know it now," she remarked with cold and even calmness. "She is dead. I think it must have happened some time ago."

He started, appalled by her tone.

"What—not your aunt?" he cried incredulously.

"No, no!" She was slightly impatient. "I mean Clare, of course. It is now a quarter past twelve. If she were not dead she would be here. Marcel must know about it. He doesn't dare tell me."

He was the more horrified because her instinctive belief so exactly coincided with Tommy's reasoned one. He looked at her closely. She was quite collected.

"My dear! Don't torture yourself!"

"Why need we keep up this pretense? You think so, too. We've believed because we've wanted to believe. We've never had any real proof that she was alive."

In vain he tried to invent some argument to shake her fatalistic conviction. His tongue clove to his mouth.

An abrupt commotion drew them to the window. Outside the gates a

"Yes, they took everything," he managed to articulate.

"Iris—look! Can this mean——"

But she had pushed him aside and was racing along the library to the vestibule. He caught up with her in time to see the two menservants hold open the doors to the officer who, cap in hand, darted a quick glance of inquiry inside.

"Madame? I am addressing Madame de Bertincourt?"

"Yes, yes! You have brought my daughter? Where is she?"

He seemed surprised. "Daughter, madame? No, it is your husband. He has met with an accident."

Iris was staring fixedly at the odd procession now on its way round the curved gravel walk. It consisted of Marcel de Bertincourt, supported by two rural gendarmes, with the concierge, who carried a battered hat, bringing up the rear.

The central figure limped painfully and was disheveled and blood stained, one eye closed beneath a purple, egg shaped swelling, the face scarred with angry scratches. Plainly the man had been subjected to some violent attack, but it was less his physical disabilities which chained Charnwood's attention than the equally patent signs of moral prostration. His good eye gazed, vacant and fear haunted, at the circle of onlookers, and as he set foot unwillingly on the shallow steps he seemed to cower from some anticipated blow.

Face to face with his wife, he opened his mouth like a gaping fish, but no sound came forth. His tongue appeared thickened, he quaked from head to foot with a palsy of dread.

"Clare!" he gasped at last. "Has she come? Is she safe?"

"Certainly not. Do you mean you expected to find her?"

He shrivelled, turned a sickly green.

"Not here——? But I believed—I hoped——" All at once he leaned heavily against one of the gendarmes and drew a shaking hand across his forehead. "My God, my God!" he muttered, shuddering.

Charnwood took advantage of this moment to withdraw to the back of the staircase. No one noticed his retirement, and, screened by the balustrade, he was able to see what was going forward. He heard Iris' urgent whisper, "Did you deliver the ransom?" and De Bertincourt's answering groan.

"Explain to her," came the helpless appeal, broken by a fit of coughing.

One of the officers spoke in a soothing tone: "Easy, now, monsieur, we'll attend to everything. You see, madame, what's happened is this: Your husband was knocked about and robbed last night in the Rambouillet forest. It was only by chance he was found and reported to us. He was gagged and tied up, inside his own car, which had been driven up amongst the trees. He was in pretty bad condition. We wanted to take him to a hospital, but insisted on being brought home."

"Robbed!" she repeated, stiffening.

"Yes, madame, so it seems, but he won't tell us what was taken. I should advise him getting to bed at once and letting a doctor look at his injuries."

"Pardon, madame!"

It was the butler at her elbow, with a glass of cognac hastily fetched. He held it toward her husband, who, after a dazed moment, seized it and drank its contents, spilling some of it. The stimulant loosened his tongue.

"Yes, they took everything," he managed to articulate. "Everything. I understand. I was totally unprepared." He avoided her eyes. "Two—two masked men sprang out and fired, shattering the windscreen in my face. Then they fell upon me, beat me with their revolvers, and left me senseless."

Those cuts? thought Charnwood, puzzled. Not clean enough for that, surely. He could have sworn those red marks were the results of finger nails.

"When did this take place?"

"I don't know. About a quarter past twelve, I think. On my way from Marly's flat. Yet there was no gainsaying the fact that he had been badly mauled. That black eye, for instance, could not possibly have been self-inflicted.

"So you see, madame," declared the other gendarme, "Monsieur was quite helpless for a matter of ten hours at least."

Iris made no comment.

Charnwood became suddenly aware of Ursule, hanging over the railing behind him. She fluttered down like a rag of cobweb blown on the wind and, seizing hold of De Bertincourt's arm, whispered something in his ear. He started and shrank. Drops of sweat stood out on his brow, he cast a wild look round as though searching for a means of escape from doom. The woman spoke again, insistently.

"Come at once, monsieur. Madame la Comtesse wishes to see you in her room."

He braced himself, his manner an absurd mixture of the condemned criminal facing a row of muskets and the small boy awaiting chastisement. He staggered to the stairs. The menservants took hold of his arms to steady him, and between them he mounted painfully, step by step, till the curving staircase concealed him.

Society Busy with Weddings, School Fetes

BY THALIA ——.

MID-JUNE finds society in an amiable frenzy of thinking up, getting, giving, and receiving gifts. Brides and grooms, graduates, and vacationers are all being remembered appropriately if not so lavishly as during the years just past.

The brides, whose weddings are yet to take place this month are:

Miss Ellen Douglas of Cedar Rapids, Ia., whose marriage to George J. Jaeger of Chicago is taking place this evening at the residence of Miss Douglas' mother, Mrs. George Bruce Douglas.

Miss Katharine Dietrich, daughter of Mrs. Charles M. Dietrich, who is to be the bride of Dr. Rodney Starkweather, son of Mrs. Frank H. Starkweather of Evanston, in New York City tomorrow.

Miss Virginia Starr Myers, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. William Starr Myers of Princeton, who will be married to Edward C. Kohlsaat Jr. of Winnetka, in Princeton on Wednesday.

Miss Betty Poor, daughter of the Fred A. Poors, who is to become Mrs. Charles Winn Canfield next Saturday afternoon.

Miss Ethel Reagan, whose marriage to George Hellyer will take place in Riverside Saturday.

Miss Edith Fairbanks, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Warren C. Fairbanks, who is to be married to Count Ruggero Visconti de Modrone on Wednesday the 24th, at the Fairbanks apartment in the presence of a small group of relatives and intimate friends.

Miss Katharine Adams, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cuthbert C. Adams, who will become the bride of William Thompson Lusk of New York City at Christ church in Winnetka on Thursday, June 25.

Miss Jeanette Higgins, whose future calling cards will read Mrs. Norris B. Gregg Jr. after her marriage on Saturday, June 27, at St. James' chapel.

Miss Sarah Wood, daughter of Col. and Mrs. Robert E. Wood, who will be married to James R. Addington at Trinity Episcopal church in Highland Park, also on the 27th.

Miss Kathleen Whitcomb, to be Mrs. Byron S. Harvey Jr. after the ceremony at the Fourth Presbyterian church on the 27th, too.

Details of Plans for the Wedding of Ellen Douglas.

The plans for the wedding this evening of Miss Ellen Douglas and George J. Jaeger Jr. at Cedar Rapids, include a large reception at Brucemore, the Douglas residence. Mrs. Frank Witwer of Cedar Rapids will be matron of honor and Miss Barbara Douglas maid of honor. The bridesmaids will be Mrs. Barrett Scudder of Lake Forest, Mrs. Charles C. Cook of St. Paul, Mrs. Robert Larner, Miss Marion Baker and Miss Miriam Fechimer of New York, Miss Mary Sinclair of Indianapolis, and Miss Kathryn Schultz of Scarsdale, N. Y.

Albert S. Klein Jr. will be best man for the groom and the ushers will be William A. Ryan, Macauley Carter, Joseph W. Cummings, John Meloy Jr., Charles K. Morris and Joseph Murphy, all of Chicago; William J. Towle Jr. of St. Paul, Harold H. Jaeger of New York, and John Rae of Pittsburgh.

Mrs. J. Allen Haines Here from New York.

Mrs. J. Allen Haines was here from New York City all last week for a visit with her sister, Mrs. William P. Martin, in Lake Forest. Somebody who saw them lunching somewhere one day told me how well Mrs. Haines looked, and how chic. She was wearing a wine colored print with a darling white organdy bib effect and a tiny white hat. Both Mr. and Mrs. Haines are coming from the east in August for a sojourn here.

Apropos weddings and wedding gifts, there is one prominent young matron who is so fond of a certain breakfast tray set—soft green and silver luster in a floral design on a white background—that she almost always gives it to the brides and bridegrooms of her acquaintance.

One of the smart beautifying establishments is initiating its clients into the charms of wearing different makeups for each costume. They sell whole outfits of lipsticks, powders, rouges, eyeshadows, and mascaras. Beware of mixups, though! Fancy the disaster of wearing green eye shade designed to harmonize with flame colored rouge and lipstick and a henna gown with the rest of the ensemble destined to go with a black and white costume. Very artful of the beautifiers, isn't it?

Mrs. Robert P. Lamont Is Visiting Daughters in New York.

Arrivals and departures — Mrs. Robert Patterson Lamont is visiting her daughters, Mrs. Chauncey Belknap and Mrs. Charles Eskridge Saltzman, in New York before she comes on to Lake Forest. . . . Mrs. Lytton Benello and her sister, Miss Rosemary Lytton, departed yesterday to spend the summer at the H. F. Bar ranch in Wyoming . . . the Marshall Fields have returned from England and are to be at their estate at Lloyd's Neck, on Long Island, for the summer . . . the Farley Hopkinses of Lake Forest have gone to Coronado Beach, Cal., for the summer . . . the Charles S. Frosts and Miss Virginia Frost depared this week-end for their summer place, Up-away, at Northeast Harbor, Me.

Stubbornness Is Best Opposed by the Use of a Little Diplomacy

BY DORIS BLAKE.

"He has a stubborn nature!"

"She has a stubborn nature!"

"My husband is as stubborn as a mule!"

"My wife—she's got a will of her own nobody can break!"

Why all these charges of stubbornness? That's the way they come complaining about the mate's or intended's strong willed character! Just as I've outlined the protests above.

Is stubbornness a quality to nurse or destroy? You could raise a pretty good argument on the subject. But I won't precipitate it here. It strikes me, though, that people who get anywhere in the world have to have a good streak of stubbornness of purpose. Child educators do not encourage the destruction of will and determination that mark youngsters often dubbed stubborn little shavers by their immediate dictators.

There are ways of getting around a stubborn person without directly assaulting him or her. Almost any woman who has been married for five, ten, fifteen years and made a go of it can give a reliable receipt for handling the stubborn other half. I have a notion she'd suggest that the opponent attempt to find out first if it isn't a quality of stubbornness in herself that precipitates the "stubborn" situations reported.

It's a curious thing how two people in love go along agreeably for a time, each making the necessary concessions for amicable relationship. Then suddenly one discovers the other has a will that had better be looked after and "reformed." What is actually wrong, nine times out of ten, is that the reformer wants to inflict his or her own will instead of being the inflicted.

If you get two strong minded individuals trying out this little play, there's sure to be a deadlock. In these two relationships harmony depends upon one being weaker than the other; or, at any rate, appearing to be weaker. They needn't be weaker; just act it for the time being.

DORIS BLAKE ANSWERS

Trouble Ahead.

"Dear Miss Blake: My fiancée has always had her own way. We quarrel. Shall I give in first? HENRY."

[Russell Photo.]

Dr. and Mrs. Samuel M. Edison of 823 Junior terrace announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Dolores, to Ralph A. Burnstine, son of Mr. and Mrs. Isador Burnstine of 6231 Kenmore avenue. Miss Edison attended Northwestern university, and is a member of Alpha Epsilon Phi sorority. Mr. Burnstine is a graduate of Western Military academy.

WEDDING

Vineyard Haven, Mass., June 14.—[Special.]—The marriage of Miss Martha Kunhardt Knapp, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Hoyt Knapp of Stamford, Conn., to Arthur Little Hamilton Jr. of Belmont, Mass., son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Little Hamilton of Sugar Hill, N. H., formerly of Chicago, took place here this noon at the home of the bride. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. John Higginson Cabot of Boston. The bride was given in marriage by her father. Her only attendants was her sister, Mrs. Bayes Marshall Norton. Parker Hamilton was his brother's best man. Only the immediate families were present. The couple left the island on the yacht Selkade for their honeymoon.

Be Sure Appearance Is O. K., Then Forget About It, Femmes

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

In the beauty parlor booth adjoining the girl in the chair said, "I'm going to be married tomorrow evening. I came today to have my hair done so it would have a more natural look for the big event."

A good hair tip that. If you have any kind of big date try to have your hair marcelled the day before, not a few hours before it. It's quite the smart caper for this season's appearance, for if there is one thing demanded of a good looking head right now it is that it wear no fresh-from-the-salon look. The looser and more natural looking the wave the bigger hit your head (the outside of it, I mean) makes.

One thing this pre-big date hair attention does for you is to discharge completely all the self-consciousness that is seen so often with a newly done head. It does away with apologies about the stiffness of the wave. It just makes you feel and act more like yourself. And there's always more beauty in being the girl you are than in being what the hairdresser or the mediste has just made you.

The same advance preparatory note applies to dress, too. It's a wise move to wear the new frock around home a time or two before you set out for the big occasion in it. Just so you will get used to it. So that next time you put it on, it's off your mind completely. Just so you won't have that prim, awfully dressed up feel that may accrue with a new style of frock you're not quite yet accustomed to.

About shoes, too. They ought to be given a good tryout so that your feet are sure they're not going to be curbed or made cranky. Also, that you lose all consciousness about the new shoes.

Grace, as you must know, lies in a blissful forgetfulness of one's appearance. (That is, after one knows one's appearance is O. K.) Those stiff little awkward jabs at hair, or at a waistline or skirt, can be eliminated by the formula for forgetfulness just prescribed.

BEAUTY ANSWERS

L. P.: A GOOD EYEWASH WILL do wonders for the eyes. It may be applied with a medicine dropper or an eyecup. A teaspoonful of salt to a pint of water makes an excellent lotion. My leaflet on the eyes may be had for a stamped, addressed envelope.

Bright Sayings of the Children

We live opposite a high school and little Billie often goes over to play with the boys. One day after he had come back his mother heard him swear.

"Why, Billie," she exclaimed, "Do you know where boys go who say words like that?"

June Bridesmaids Wear Crisp Organdy

BY BETTINA BEDWELL.

PARIS.—[Special.]—Organdy and bridesmaids are natural affinities and, this summer, organdy being one of Paris' pet afternoon and evening fabrics, is an extra inducement to become that happy bridesmaid who, the poet assures us, "makes a happy bride."

Paris is wearing her organdy out into strips, placed horizontally. Lanvin favors this treatment and so does Suzanne Talbot. These "horizontal gowns" are invariably simple, for the strips are trimming enough in themselves, though Lanvin adds variety by making the top in one color and the lower skirt in another.

The June bridesmaid's frock, sketched today from Ardanse, shows you how charming such a style can be. It's all made of alternating strips of white and rose organdy with picot edges, placed slightly overlapping each other on a white organdy foundation that is cut with a chemise décolleté and that molds the figure to below the hips in the line prescribed by Paris, while it is really voluminous round the hem. The strips are studded with tiny strass dew drops with the prettiest effect imaginable, and the shoulder straps are all strass.

Ardanse makes a little matching organdy muff to be carried by the bridesmaid instead of a bouquet, a fashion adopted at the smartest weddings in Paris, this season.

The hat is of rose Milan straw trimmed with white flowers. The gloves are white glacé kid and the slippers rose taffeta.

This ensemble will be smart for garden parties or informal evening dances, later on.

Now Easy to Remove Yellow that Offends

Now there's no reason why your teeth should be stained, yellow, discolored or prey to decay—why your gums should ever be spongy and tender. For science has discovered the way to destroy millions of germs that swarm into the mouth with every breath and attack teeth and gums. It's the way to make teeth gleaming white. It's called the Kolynos Dry-Brush Technique.

Start using this technique—a half-inch of Kolynos on a dry brush. Overnight you'll note an improvement. In just 3 days your teeth will look whiter—fully 3 shades whiter. Gums will feel firmer and look healthier. Breath and taste will be clean and sweet.

Kolynos is unique. The very moment it enters the mouth, this highly concentrated dental cream becomes a refreshing FOAM which permits the use of a dry brush, thus making Kolynos 10 times more effective.

This penetrating FOAM gets into and cleans out every tiny pit, fissure and crevice. Kills millions of destructive mouth germs, 190 million in the first 15 seconds. Erases tartar and stimulates the gums.

THUS TEETH ARE QUICKLY AND EASILY CLEANED AS THEY SHOULD BE CLEANED—RIGHT DOWN TO THE BEAUTIFUL NAKED WHITE ENAMEL WITHOUT INJURY.

Now if you want sound, dazzling white teeth and firm, coral-pink gums start using the Kolynos Dry-Brush Technique. Buy a tube of Kolynos.

Food Talk.

Mrs. F. C. C. asks: "What can one do with crystallized fruits that have hardened—cherries, ginger, citron, orange peel, and raisins? I do not use much of them in a small family. How long can one keep bouillon cubes? I am afraid to use some that I have had on hand several weeks."

When crystallized and dried fruits lose some of their natural water content, they become hard and dry. The only way to restore the original and desirable quality of moistness is to provide a condition which will permit the surface to soften and expand sufficiently for the absorption of water. To do this it is best to spread the fruit out one layer deep in a colander or a wire sieve, then place this over hot water and cover, so that the rising steam can come slowly in contact with the fruit or ginger roots.

At this season of the year this softening process may be done off the stove. In colder weather it may be better to place the pan of water over a low flame. One must watch the process to see that no more moisture is absorbed than is necessary to restore the product to its natural state. Of course, if one is using the fruit immediately this does not matter so much. The necessary cooking of the food containing the fruit will take care of the extra moisture.

If the fruit is to be packed away for future use, it is necessary that only the optimum amount of water be absorbed, because a slight excess would cause the fruit to ferment and its value would be lost.

Beef bouillon cubes will keep indefinitely if sealed. They should be kept in a dry, cool place. These cubes are chiefly salt and protein, and they are sterile when they are put into their box. The moisture content of the sealed bouillon cube is so low—5 per cent—that at ordinary temperatures there is no chance of spoilage. If the box is opened the cubes will absorb moisture and spoilage will occur sooner or later. Keeping the cubes out of the icebox prevents the absorption of moisture.

But why keep a small box of bouillon cubes around so long when there are so many uses for them? They are an excellent gravy extender. For example: When the drippings or meat juices from the roast are inadequate for the gravy, a bouillon cube may be added to increase the quantity of the rich meat flavor. Chicken bouillon cubes are a pleasant addition to bland flavored soups, such as asparagus, cauliflower, carrot, and spinach. They make a delicious quick bouillon base. All that is necessary is to put the cube into boiling water and allow the cube to dissolve. Then add the preferred flavoring.

The resulting bouillon should never boil, because boiling causes the aromatic extracts of the chicken or beef to evaporate. When making white sauces to combine meats for croquettes or cutlets, the bouillon cube adds a good flavor to a bland flavored meat like veal.

BOUILLON WITH PARSLEY.

4 cups boiling water
4 to 8 cubes beef or chicken bouillon cubes
Dash celery salt

Add the water to the cubes and stand them over the boiling water until the cubes are dissolved. Add the celery salt, and pour into serving cups. Sprinkle parsley over the top.

BRAISED LIVER.

Fat salt pork
¾ cup diced onion
¾ cup diced celery
2 cloves
Bit of bay leaf
2 cups stock or water
1½ tbsp. butter
2 tbsp. flour

Prepare the liver and skewer, and tie in shape. Lard the upper side with salt pork. Put in a deep pan with trimmings from lardoons, carrot, onion, celery, peppercorns, cloves, bay leaf, and stock or water. Cover closely and bake two hours in slow oven [300 degrees F.], uncovering the last 20 minutes. Remove from the pan, strain the liquid, and thicken with butter and flour browned together. Serve around liver.

EMBARRASSING MOMENTS

A Slip of the Tongue.

While attending a dance my boy friend's fraternity was giving, I was standing by the checkroom as he was helping the other boys with the wraps. The president of the fraternity came and stood beside me. I said to my boy friend, "Pick me out a good looking coat when the dance is over."

The president said to his girl, "How would you like that black coat with the pink scarf?" I said, "O, that isn't so hot, why not pick out a good looking one for her?"

Imagine my embarrassment when she said, "O, that is my coat!"

After this I think before I speak.

If you have a stove of this type stored away in your attic where it is never used, won't you resurrect it for this family? Having no means of cooking makes the situation and uncomfortable one, and an oil stove would solve the problem.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

Boston, Mass., June 14.—After nine days of fruitless search in various places, the White Sox caught up with a victory today. They mustered all their possible strength behind fairly steady pitching by Luckless Tommy Thomas to achieve an easy decision over the Red Sox. The score was 7 to 4.

Various things entered into this long overdue triumph. Manager Bush discarded a pair of favorite street shoes which threatened at any moment to expose his bare feet to the pavement. In the clubhouse was a goldfish, sent to Bush by a well wisher in Three Oaks, Mich., and well fed by Trainer Buckner, so that life would be sustained in its supposedly lucky for luck fast. To complete the happy triangle, Bush sent Lou Fonseca to the outfield, where there would be less strain on the veteran's shaky legs, moved Johnny Kerr to second, and returned Irv Jeffries to third.

Sox Hit Timely.

To get the runs which gave Thomas his third victory in thirteen starts this season, the White Sox displayed numerous hits of timely hitting against bespectacled Danny McFayden.

In addition to this, the rabbit's pressure exerted such a powerful influence over the Red Sox that they perpetrated a couple of helpful errors and MacFayden himself aided the Chicagoans with his wildness.

The Sox began the day's scoring with a run in the second inning. Fonseca started with a grounder, which Rhyne fumbled. He was nudged down to second on Watwood's bunt. Kerr, who has been on the bench considerably despite a .400 average, lost no time proving his mark is justified. He singled between first and second, giving Fonseca time to score.

Boston did a bit of sniping in its portion of the second and tied the score. Pickering singled to left and raced to second on Sweeney's infield out. Rhyne shot a single over second base and Pickering scored. A single also was produced by Berry, but MacFayden grounded to a forceout.

Fonseca Doubles.

The White Sox got back to the matter of scoring in the fourth, two runs coming from a pair of hits, and a base on balls. Fonseca led off with a double just inside the left field line. He raced to third on Watwood's infield out, and came home when MacFayden uncorked a wild pitch. Kerr was walked and Jeffries doubled just inside the right field line, scoring Kerr.

The Red Sox came up with one run in their half, making the count 3 to 2 against them. After Rhyne singled to center, Thomas set down the next two batters, but he didn't have the same luck with Oliver. The latter hoisted a long fly close to the right field line and Fothergill, out of sheer necessity, endeavored to stage one of his diving one string catches. By the time the play was completed, the ball had passed past for a triple, scoring Rhyne. Tate then picked Oliver off third.

Berry Hits Homer.

Chicago came up with two more runs in the fifth. Blue opened with a single. After Cissell had fouled out, Fothergill grounded to Warstler, who passed to the plate. Blue turned back to third and Catcher Berry threw far into left field trying to head him off. Blue scored and Fothergill waddled around. Fonseca's single sent Fothergill to third and he scored while Watwood was being forced by Warstler. This stretched the Chicago lead to 6 to 2, but part of it vanished in the sixth when Rhyne survived an error by Kerr's fumble and ran home ahead of Berry's home run over the left field fence.

To make their decision a bit more secure the Sox padded their total with two more runs in the ninth. Thomas singled to center with one out. Blue doubled. Cissell doubled along the left field line. Thomas scored easily and Blue intended to pull up at third, but Coach Rothrock sent his throw in to the plate. Blue kept going to the plate. Ted Lyons and Milton Gaston are expected to handle the heavy work in the second game of the series today.

Retired Coach Loses Five Months' Fight.

Minneapolis, Minn., June 14.—[Special.]—Dr. Henry L. Williams, former University of Minnesota football coach, died today of heart trouble and lung complications after five months' illness.

At the bedside were Mrs. Williams and a son, Dr. Henry L. Williams Jr., of the Mayo clinic.

Dr. Williams had been in the hospital since early in January. A month ago it was announced he was improving and might soon be able to return home, but he suffered a relapse shortly afterwards and Dr. Edwin L. Gardner announced that death was only a matter of time.

Devised Many Plays.

Dr. Williams was 62 years old. Although a physician of note, football was Dr. Williams' hobby and it was through his work as a coach that he gained national fame.

During his twenty-one years as head coach at Minnesota Dr. Williams established himself as one of the greatest strategists in football.

Along with Fielding H. Yost of Michigan, A. A. Stagg of Chicago and Glenn [Pop] Warner, he developed many plays which in later years were used by the new school of coaches.

Dr. Williams' most important contribution to football was the "Minnesota shift," one of the greatest offensive weapons known to the game. It created wide discussion and finally action was taken to curb its effectiveness.

The doctor, a graduate of the medical department of Yale university where he achieved fame as a football player and track star, became head football coach at Minnesota in 1900, a position he held until 1921.

Five of Dr. Williams' players became nationally famous coaches. They are Gil Dobie at Cornell, Ossie Solem at Drake university, Clarke Shaughnessy, at Loyola university of New Orleans, Bernie Bierman at Tulane university, and Dr. Boles Rosenthal, who for eight years was line coach at California university.

Coaches Army Eleven.

In his college days, Dr. Williams played half back on Yale football teams with Mr. Stagg.

Following his graduation from Yale in 1891 he went to West Point as head football coach and led the Army team to its first victory over the Navy. From the Army he went to the William Penn Charter school in Philadelphia and remained there as football coach until offered the post at Minnesota in 1900.

Within a few years he had raised Minnesota to one of the leading football powers in the middle west, his Minnesota shift becoming famous as his big, rangy teams, noted for their attacking power, climbed to the top of the Western conference.

During his 21 years as Gopher coach Dr. Williams won two undisputed Big Ten championships and tied for the title five times. In 1903 the Gophers tied with Michigan after a 6 to 6 battle which still stands as one of the most memorable in the long series of struggles between the two universities. The next year the Gophers tied with Michigan and Wisconsin for the championship and tied with Wisconsin again in 1906, coming back to win the title in 1909. In 1910 the Gophers tied with Illinois for the title and followed with a clear claim to the championship in 1911.

Title Denied Best Teams.

His two greatest teams, those of 1915 and 1916, were among the best ever developed in the country, although neither won a clear title to a Big Ten championship.

The 1915 team finished in a tie for the title with Illinois, after the two teams played a 6 to 6 deadlock, and the following year, although the Gophers were even stronger, they lost out to Ohio State by suffering a surprise defeat at the hands of Illinois.

Dr. Williams helped organize the American Intercollegiate Athletic association in 1915 and was chairman of its rules committee for several years. He was credited with proposing the rule which made the forward pass legal and revolutionized the game.

Cards Win 2 from Phils, 7-3 and 13-4

St. Louis, Mo., June 14.—(AP)—The Cardinals found Philadelphia pitching to their liking here today and opened the series with a double victory, 7 to 3 and 13 to 4. The Cardinals scored nine runs in the first inning of the second game off four Philadelphia pitchers. Bolen, the starting pitcher, was taken out before he retired a batter. He walked the first two men to face him. H. Elliott, however, was charged with the defeat.

Paul Derringer, the Cardinal pitcher in the first game, started poorly. Klein hitting a homer in the first inning with a man on base, but grew stronger as the game progressed, fanning eleven. Rhem was the Phils' master in the second, although Whitney got a home run. Scores:

REDMOND PITS BULK AGAINST PRIMO'S TONIGHT

New York, June 14.—[Special.]—The postponed heavyweight ring encounter between Primo Carnera, Italian giant, and Pat Redmond, massive Irishman, originally scheduled for last Wednesday night, will be held tomorrow night at Ebbets field in Brooklyn, unless inclement weather again interferes, in which event the contest will be put over until Tuesday night.

Scheduled for ten rounds, the match, through the postponement, has assumed more significant proportions than it originally held, without, however, increasing its competitive promise. Carnera will meet a man approaching his own huge size and this has aroused a measure of curiosity.

Carnera is under contract to box in September against the winner of the Max Schmeling-Young Stribling world's heavyweight championship bout in Cleveland, July 3, and if he loses tomorrow night he will be replaced by Tommy Loughran.

MIAMI DESPAIRS NO MORE; HAILS BRUEN AS SAVIOR

A Subtle Power Brings Legalized Pleasure.

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, June 14.—The hero of the Johnstown flood probably was no more opportune savior nor any more important fellow in his own home than Frank J. Bruen is at this writing in the city of Miami, Fla., a place which has now been allowed to turn legitimate largely through Mr. Bruen's subtle efforts.

The very subtlety of Mr. Bruen's efforts makes it so difficult and delicate to explain them that I would rather not try, but it will outline the case to say that after the governor of the state had vetoed the pari-mutuel bill a short time ago, Mr. Bruen hurried from New York to Florida and that a few days later the bill was passed over the veto.

The importance of this political stroke to the city of Miami was signified by the people of the place in three distinct social demonstrations, described to me by Mr. Cliff Moshier, a Miami journalist, betwen races at Belmont park, Saturday afternoon.

Rejoice Over Race Bill.

"The first time the bill was passed," Mr. Moshier said, "the flash brought the people into the streets in one of those armistice celebrations. It meant that the hotels would be full again next winter. It meant jobs and pleasure money, under a legal guarantee. There are millions of dollars tied up in the hotels, night clubs and swimming pools in Miami.

"And Joe Widener had said that if the legislature wouldn't allow him to run the Hialeah race track with legalized pari-mutuel betting he would close the track and plow it under. If given the law, he would spend a million dollars this year in the dull summer season, mostly on labor, improving the plant and, in the next few years would develop the Miami season into the southern equivalent of the Saratoga season in August. Pleasure is our only industry down there.

"Naturally, Miami wanted the bill because Miami has about the same liberal disposition as Chicago and New York. Miami was always being tossed around in the legislature by the rural legislators from the swamps. So, when the bill passed the first time the joy was widespread and I might also say, unconfined.

Governor Spreads Gloom.

"But a few days later, when the flash came that the governor had vetoed the bill, all this joy turned to sadness and annoyance. I imagine it was like armistice night in Berlin. In two of the department stores, the proprietors went through all their stocks and marked everything down 24 per cent, hoping to unload. People who had been hoping to get work catering to the crowds or rebuilding the track if the law passed, began taking long walks in training to walk a long, long way from Florida. The real estate men actually started to fold up at last and the two Miamis became an American Alsace - Lorraine, pining whole heartedly for restitution to the mother cities of the north.

"Then Mr. Bruen appeared, not in Tallahassee, but in Miami. And a few days later, all the sadness and annoyance turned to gladness and joy once more when the legislature passed the bill over the veto. It was just as if the two towns had been delivered from the hands of an enemy army and Mr. Bruen was the leader of the relief expedition.

Parade Downtown Streets.

"Caesar La Monaca, the leader of the champion drum corps of the American Legion, got a big band together and led a parade through the downtown streets. People came piling out of houses and clerks hopped over the counters in the stores and rushed into the streets to fall into the procession. Mr. La Monaca led the procession hither and thither, with his band whooping and booming joyous selections and the tail of the parade growing longer and longer.

"Finally they came to a stand at Bayfront park and all the best people of our two towns got up and made speeches to our citizens. But our

Athletic Exercises of Czechs, Germans Impressive Display

BY WILFRID SMITH.

Forty thousand American citizens of German origin yesterday assembled at Soldiers' field to do homage to their race and its leaders in speech, song and gymnastic exercise. For five hours, from the opening contest, a soccer football game between teams representing Milwaukee and Chicago, until the conclusion, a field handball game between the German-American Athletic association and the Turnverein Eiche, the program offered one athletic tableau after another.

The German societies will unite next Sunday at Soldiers' field with the Czecho-Slovaks, Hungarians, Norwegians, Slovaks, Poles and high school students in the Chicagoland Sports Congress. This congress, sponsored by THE TRIBUNE, will bring together all races and organizations for the first time, and more than 5,000 will take part in the massed drill, the climax of the program.

1,000 Germans Participate.

One thousand Germans, many of whom participated yesterday, will join in the Chicagoland Sports Congress.

Following the soccer game, the parade of contestants at 2 o'clock officially opened "Deutscher Tag." The American flag was raised while spectators and contestants sang the "Star

More than 700 Chicagoans of Czecho-Slovakian extraction gathered at Cermak park, 26th street and Kostner avenue, yesterday afternoon for the annual slet, or meeting of the central district of the American Sokol union. A crowd of 3,000 watched these men, women and children athletes give a demonstration of mass calisthenics and marching that might have taken place on the West Point parade ground.

All of the athletes who took part in yesterday's exhibition, together with hundreds of other Czecho-Slovakians from Wisconsin and Indiana, will play an important part in the Chicagoland sports congress being sponsored by THE TRIBUNE next Sunday afternoon at Soldiers' field.

All Well Drilled.

Yesterday's slet was a vivid testimonial to the teachings of Dr. Miroslav Tyrs, the founder of the Sokol idea in the Czecho-Slovakian homeland. Every participant displayed the result of painstaking practice, and all of the numbers on the program were executed with a precision and speed that would have cheered a top sergeant's heart.

The coöperation between the various units was all the more remarkable when it was pointed out that they hailed from widely separated

BY EDWARD BURNS.

Fred Frankhouse, who hadn't won a game this season, came to town yesterday with the peppery Boston Braves and was elected as the foil for Charley Root, who was bent on winning his seventh victory.

Several things went amiss, however, and Mr. Frankhouse was the hero in as swell a strikeout carnival as any of the 36,000 spectators could hope to see—a carnival, sad to relate, which ended with the Braves beating the Cubs, 3 to 1.

Before we tell you more about the pitching splendor of the festival we may as well mention that the Cubs' one run was Hack Wilson's No. 5 homer, which was the sixth and last Cub hit of the afternoon.

19 Strikeouts—Near Record.

There were 19 strikeouts in the game—four fewer than the all time major league record. Eight strikeouts were executed by Root in the first five innings. Frankhouse also fanned eight, but his stretched over eight innings. Root gave way to a pinch batter in the seventh, and Baecht, his successor, fanned two. Haid, who took Frankhouse's place when he became ill with two out in the eighth, fanned Cuyler to end the game. Incidentally it was the third whiff of the game for Kl.

Every Brave who went to bat except Frankhouse fanned, and there were only five Boston hits, one in the third, in which Root struck out the side, two in the fourth, during which Root struck out two, and the depressing fifth when he fanned one, but was charged with a grievous error that proved the break of the game.

Braves Work Squeeze Play.

The Braves' first run, in the fourth, was acquired by diligent and skilled effort, through the execution of the squeeze play. After Maranville had been called out on strikes, Wally Berger tripled to right center. Worthington fanned to furnish the second out. Then Neun laid down a perfect bunt along the third base foul line, Berger scoring and Neun beating out the bunt without a play being made for him. Randy Moore popped to English to end the inning.

Spohrer opened the fifth inning with a double to right center. Then Maguire attempted to sacrifice him to third. Root dashed over and got Maguire's bunt towards third and, without noticing that Jurges had come in for the play threw the ball over uncovered third base, toward the Cub bull pen. Spohrer scored and Maguire reached second. Frankhouse attempted to bunt, but popped to Root. Dreesen singled to right, scoring Maguire with the final Brave run. Dreesen was out trying to reach second, Cuyler to English, and Maranville fanned.

Keep Cubs Away from Third.

Aside from the activity involved in Hack's homer, not a Cub runner reached third and only four reached second. Again, excepting Hack's homer, it may be said the Cubs had only two scoring chances. In the fifth two runners were on as a result of singles by Root and English, but Hornsby ended the chance with a fly to R. Moore. In the seventh Grimm walked and Cuyler singled to put two on with one out, but English fouled to Dreesen and Hornsby again ended things with a fly to Berger.

Hornsby incidentally spent another hitless afternoon, a complete collapse of batting prowess that has extended over seven successive games, except for a single in Saturday's final with the Phillies. Rogers' average in the 13 games against the eastern visitors has been .106, but despite his failure the Cubs have won eight from the eastern invaders, while losing five. Cub attaches insist that Rogers is in good physical condition and predict his early return to the Cub offensive.

Smith to Oppose Seibold.

The Braves will play the second of their three games series with the Cubs this afternoon and Smith, former Brave, will go after his seventh win of the season and his second over his former mates. Socks Seibold will pitch for the Braves.

After the game tomorrow the Cubs will leave for Brooklyn, where on Thursday they will begin their second eastern invasion of the year.

COLLEGE SPORTS REFORM NOTED IN CARNEGIE REPORT

Recruiting Activity on the Wane, Bulletin Says.

New York, June 14.—(AP)—The Carnegie Foundation for the advancement of teaching has discovered a "notable advance in the attack upon recruiting and subsidizing in American college athletics" since it released its famous Bulletin 23 a year and a half ago.

"Much remains to be done," it says, and "the day may never come when our college sport will be completely freed from these abuses," which the Foundation described in 1929 as the "deepest shadow that darkens American college and school athletics," but it believes now that "a number of influences for improvement are at work."

Coupling this with the conclusion that the "deflation of American football already has begun," through a decline in gate receipts and ballyhoo, the Foundation's latest findings were released for publication today, in Bulletin 26, written by Howard J. Savage, John T. McGovern, and Harold W. Bentley.

Study 164 Schools.

The authors have consumed only 58 pages in noting the trends and effects since they stirred the college athletic world in 1929 with the 383 page Bulletin 23, but they have extended their studies from 130 to 164 schools, colleges, and universities.

Far less sensational than its predecessor, both in tone and text, Bulletin 26 is devoted chiefly to an examination of changes within and without college walls, designed to better the relationships between sport and the educational process.

Its chief findings are [1] the assumption of greater responsibility for the proper conduct of athletics by university officers and trustees; [2] the notable attempts to eliminate abuses which have their roots in the prevalent commercialization of American college sport, despite evidence these abuses are practiced more actively, though less obviously, in some cases.

Reform Is Widespread.

The Foundation finds that the "efforts to reduce recruiting and subsidizing of college athletics . . . are not confined to any one section of the country or to any single group or kind of institution." The report goes on to say:

"They have occurred in New England, Pennsylvania and New York state. They have led, in parts of the middle west, to a rather general belief that subsidizing and recruiting have diminished. In the south opinion is divided.

"On the other hand, in some quarters there are signs of a recrudescence of both recruiting and subsidizing. As one observer puts the matter: 'Now that the whirlwind has passed, these people are beginning to come out of their cyclone cellars and go about their business as usual.'"

Hit at Alumni Funds.

"Subsidizing by alumni," the report finds, "however small in volume, is probably the cause of more rumors and ill feeling in American college sport today than any other single practice."

"Whatever conditions existed at Fordham in the past," the report specifies, "the university now appears to be free from alumni pressure in athletics. Alumni pressure for victory in football and in some other sports or for dominance in the shaping of athletic policies has been considerably modified at Harvard, Lehigh and Muhlenberg. Certain Yale alumni have questioned the right of the general public to control any scheme of college sport."

SMITTY—MAN TO MAN

Twenty Grand Passes Up American Derby Prize

BY FRENCH LANE.

Twenty Grand is not coming out to Chicago to grab the $50,000 American Derby prize at Washington Park next Saturday.

And when the word was passed out among some 20 other candidates for the Derby at the Homewood course yesterday afternoon they neighed in chorus, "Thank heaven!"

Gives Others a Chance.

While Chicagoans are anxious to see Twenty Grand in action, his absence from the American Derby is probably going to add to rather than detract from the race. For if the Kentucky Derby and the Belmont stakes winner had come for the Derby he might have scared so many other contenders out that there wouldn't be a quorum in the Bahr gate next Saturday afternoon when Starter Harry Morrisey calls the roll.

Twenty Grand's absence probably will make possible a field of 16 to 20, headed by Mate, the Preakness winner; Sweep All, second in the Kentucky Derby, and Sun Meadow, second in the Belmont. All the candidates are at Washington Park except Mate and Sun Meadow. The former is due here from New York this morning. Sun Meadow is scheduled to arrive on Wednesday.

Idle Until July 4.

Jimmy Rowe, who trains Twenty Grand, announced in New York yesterday that Twenty Grand's next engagement will be in the Dwyer stakes at Aqueduct on July 4. Following the Dwyer he will move west for the classic at Arlington Park.

The Derby Trial tomorrow afternoon at a mile and an eighth may eliminate some of the westerners. But not many of them will fall by the wayside, for they have beaten each other so frequently, a defeat in the Trial does not necessarily mean a beating in the Derby. For instance, Pittsburgher and Sweep All have hooked up six times this spring. Pittsburgher has beaten Sweep All in four of those battles, yet most handicappers will contend Sweep All's Derby chances are the brighter. Spanish Play and Pittsburgher have met five times. Pittsburgher beat Spanish Play on three of those occasions. Spanish Play has beaten Lightning Bolt twice in three meetings. And so it goes all down through the records of the westerners.

Tom Kearney of St. Louis, who has made a future book on the American Derby, announced his final odds yesterday and he holds Mate and Sweep All as the first choices. His final quotations follow:

Big shipments of horses are due at Arlington this week to await the opening of the season there two weeks from today. Misstep, the little red hero of other seasons, is already there getting into condition. Looks as if he will go into action soon. William Ziegler's first string is due from Belmont tomorrow. The John Hertz stable will pull in from Belmont at the same time. It includes the 3 year old filly, Risque, which is in grand condition. Some 600 horses will move from New York to Arlington within the next ten days.

Derby week opens at Washington Park today with a fine program. It includes three allowance races. They are a juvenile affair which will engage some of the fleetest here, a dash at six furlongs, and another at a mile for 3 year olds and upward. Many Chicago favorites go to the post in these races.

HORSE KILLED, JOCKEY HURT IN COLLISION

A race horse was killed and its jockey was seriously injured in a collision at the Washington Park course yesterday morning. The horse killed was Bob's Luck, owned by Mrs. L. Swikert, Highland Park. Charles Turner, 18 years old, Louisville, Ky., the jockey, was taken to St. James hospital in Chicago Heights.

Turne had brought Bob's Luck to a full stop at the grandstand. Machete, owned by Theodore Miller of Louisville, Ky., and being worked out by Willie Jones, an exercise boy, came down the stretch at a fair pace. As Machete reached the grandstand Bob's Luck swerved in front of the running horse and the two collided.

Both riders were thrown and both horses fell, Bob's Luck falling on Turner. Bob's Luck died in a few minutes, apparently of a broken neck. Machete and Jones escaped, save for bruises and scratches.

Miami Happy Again; Hails Bruen, Savior

citizens held Mr. Bruen responsible for their deliverance and they saved their greatest demonstration for him when he got up to loose his own remarks.

"It may seem strange that the citizens of a place having tall buildings and traffic lights on the streets should go crazy over an act of the legislature to permit gambling on the horse and dog races, but you have to realize that the people of Miami felt that they were backed against the wall. Their jobs were at stake, those big hotels which cost so much money were not put up for the accommodation of traveling drummers.

Freed at Last.

"So one day they were delivered, another day they were captured again by the country districts, and finally, Mr. Bruen came rushing down from New York to set them free at last."

I think it was mostly by personal interviews and telephone conversations that Mr. Bruen accomplished his mission. One of the state senators who voted for the bill over the veto was a clergyman who had previously voted against it. He explained that he had taken counsel with his wife and the effect of their decision was that it was less sinful than they had always thought to gamble on the races.

A few days later another item from Tallahassee reported that there was no money in the treasury for the purpose of paying off the legislators, but I would not suggest that the honorable statesmen allowed themselves to be influenced by this in voting for a mutuel bill with its attractive revenue clause.

Seems to Be a Trend.

The developments in Florida seem significant of something that the writers on economics would call a trend. In recent years Illinois had legalized prize fighting and horse racing, two old favorite taboos, and the horses have been running again in California and even in Texas. North Carolina almost approved racing with mutuels. There is table gambling again in Arkansas, and even in New Hampshire some of the chaps are making one more attempt to conduct a horse meeting at the present time. Nevada, of course, never was troubled by a fastidious conscience, but lately the state has boldly given the explicit sanction of the law to forms of amusement which most communities still call sin.

Mr. Bruen, now a citizen of Florida as of comparatively recent date, begins to assume the lineaments of the successor to Tex Rickard. He worked a spell for the Garden firm in New York, but was unable to give free expression to his genius there. The Garden is a soulless corporation and your true promoter is as badly cramped by board room procedure as an author is by facts.

Ruby to Wrestle Nell Tomorrow on Congress Card

Ruby Allen, claimant of the woman's wrestling championship, and Nell Donald, contender, meet in a 15 minute match in Frank Spengler's show at the Congress stadium, 2333 Milwaukee avenue, tomorrow night. Nell, who states she has an airplane spin that would make Jim Londos turn green with envy, will attempt to try it on Ruby. The latter specializes in a flying mare.

Mike Dundee, Rock Island Italian who stopped Joey Freeman recently, meets Lou Terry in the six round feature bout of the boxing end of the show. Terry is from St. Louis and holds victories over Delmont and Eddie Anderson. Dundee has a win over Benny Bass, junior lightweight titleholder.

Bass Fishing Season Opens in State Today

BY BOB BECKER.

Illinois bass fishermen may swing into action this morning because state regulations permit the taking of bass beginning June 15. A bass must be ten inches long to be legal size and even that large a fish won't be legal unless the fisherman has a state fishing license.

Where to go bass fishing in Illinois is something of a problem because this state is not richly endowed with either small or large mouth bass as compared to the big lake states like Wisconsin, Michigan and Minnesota. Moreover, not enough of these game fish are being raised annually to stock available fishing waters.

In addition, it would require a fairly large number of rearing ponds scattered through the state to turn out the young fish. Another factor in the bass situation in Illinois has been the drought. Countless fish haven't been able to survive because of low water.

In northern Illinois there are some bass and a fellow has a chance to snag a few by working hard on the Fox and other lakes in that chain. Rock river, which years ago was a corking small mouth bass stream, still manages to produce the small mouths, but the fisherman must know the spots to get fish. When we canoed the Rock river a few years ago anglers were having some luck above Dixon. Mostly a case of wading the stream with a fly rod.

If we wanted bass fishing in this state we'd hit for the lower Illinois river where the large mouths have full sway in the backwaters, bayous and many lakes which are features of the Illinois river lowlands. From the vicinity of Browning on down the stream the water is clean and the bass still flourish.

Other states have found that good fishing can only be maintained with a big budget for hatcheries and rearing ponds. Illinois will have to follow suit if good fishing is wanted. For example, Michigan's two year budget to grow fish ran around $600,000.

Featherweights Fight on Mills Card Thursday.

Whether Earl Mastro still belongs in the top flight of the featherweights will be brought out Thursday at Mills stadium when the west side Italian meets Midget Mike O'Dowd in Jim Mullen's second outdoor show of the summer.

The O'Dowd fight, one of the two ten rounders headlining Mullen's show will be Mastro's first Chicago start since his fight with La Barba at the Stadium last August. Since then Earl has been on the shelf as a result of an operation. He fought his first battle a few weeks ago in Louisville when he knocked out Ward Spoon in three rounds.

O'Dowd gave Earl quite an argument two years ago when the two met and since then he has battled some of the game's best to a standoff.

Mastro has taken on a few [illegible] during his inactivity, which should prove to his advantage in his fights, since he nearly always has given opponents three or four pounds scaling around 122 pounds. He will weigh around 126 pounds for the O'Dowd fight.

Another ten rounder, to be featured with the Mastro-O'Dowd tilt, will be announced today. Kid White of Houston, Tex., regained the welterweight championship of Mexico last week stopping Alfredo Gaona in the ninth round.

Is WATER-COOLING in motor cars DOOMED?

Aviation has made great strides of progress since the general adoption a few years ago of the air-cooled type of engine. Since Lindbergh's epochal flight, all important speed, endurance, polar, altitude and distance flights have been made with air-cooling. Today 75 of the 82 airplane engines are air-cooled.

Recently, in U. S. Army tank demonstrations, the Franklin air-cooled engine successfully met the most extensive and gruelling tests. In armored cars, too, the same superiority was shown. When mounted into a Waco airplane the Franklin engine made a series of dramatic flights—the first automobile motor to fly an airplane.

In the De Luxe Franklin, the air-cooled engine has proved itself master of motor car performance. Franklin Owners enjoy greater roadability and pleasure in driving than is known in other cars. The superiority of air-cooling in both the automobile and the airplane has caused engineering authorities to ask, "Is water-cooling in motor cars doomed?" Drive the new De Luxe Franklin—you'll recognize immediately what air-cooled power means to modern motor car travel.

Cleveland, O., June 14.—(AP)—The Philadelphia Athletics lost a 6 to 4 decision to the Cleveland Indians today through fielding errors and wildness of Pitcher Bill Shores. It was the first Indian win over the Athletics this season. Leading, 4 to 3, in the eighth, Shores, who had succeeded McDonald in the fifth, walked Porter. Burnett was safe on Bishop's poor throw, and Averill singled to fill the bases. Shores then forced Porter in with the tying run by walking Morgan. Pirates Lose to Robins, 6-3; Error Does It

Brooklyn, N. Y., June 14.—(AP)—An error by Howard Groskloss, young Pittsburgh shortstop, spoiled a ball game for Larry French today and enabled the Brooklyn Robins to win a one game series, 6 to 3.

Two were out in the last half of the eighth, runners were on first and second, and the score was tied, when Lombardi hit an easy grounder to Groskloss. The ball dribbled between his legs without even touching his glove. After that the Robins scored two more runs.

Joe Shaute allowed only six hits, three of which filled the bases in the ninth and led to his removal from the game. Jack Quinn relieved him and forced Pinch Hitter Mosolf to hit into a double play, ending the game. Score:

Athletic Exercises of Czechs, Germans Impressive Display

Cermak Park Drills and Marches Are Colorful.

Spangled Banner" and "Deutschland Ueber Alles."

One hundred girls, pupils of the Von Steuben High school, under the direction of Anna Makowsky, presented an interpretive dance. They were followed by a mass chorus, composed of the United Singers and the United Male chorus in two numbers conducted by H. A. Rehberg.

Present Mass Drill.

Leopold Saltiel, president of the Illinois Turnbezirk and president of the German day committee, delivered the address of welcome and announced the program from the speakers' stand. Mayor Cermak also spoke.

The Styrian club of Chicago presented a folk dance and then for a half hour the German-American athletic clubs of Chicago and Machine Gun company A of the 131st infantry, Illinois National Guard, offered a series of athletic exhibitions.

Included in this section of the program were the 100 meter and 1,500 meter races, a two mile bicycle race by members of the German-American Cycle club, relay races, weight juggling, swing ball games, and a tug of war for the Illinois Staats Herold trophy.

Opposed to 18th Amendment.

Ladies' and Actives' classes of the Turnbezirk presented a series of free exercises. Alpine folk dances, additional mass gymnastic exercises by the men of the Turnbezirk, apparatus exhibitions, fencing and broad sword competition concluded the program.

Prof. Erich von Schroetter, of Northwestern university and associate editor of the Illinois Staats-Herold, delivered the principal address.

The resolutions committee composed of William C. Teichmann, chairman; Adolph Gill, Fred A. Rixmann, William F. Behrens and Leopold Saltiel presented the annual resolution which was adopted. Copies of the resolutions, which included an article in opposition to all sumptary laws and "particularly the 18th amendment to the Constitution," will be sent to President Hoover, the senators and representatives of the United States congress.

parts of the central district. There were groups from every section of Chicago, from Cicero, from Stickney, from Berwyn and from Oak Park, but all went through their paces as if they had trained in one unit for months.

The feature event of the day brought together 500 men and women in a mass drill that was a symphony of motion for the manner in which it was carried out. The participants marched onto the field, deployed themselves in seven lines, each containing more than 20 rows of three, the scarlet bandanas worn by the women and the blue and white uniforms of the men making a harmonious color scheme.

Give Calisthenics Show.

After five minutes of marching tactics, the athletes gave a demonstration of calisthenics that was a tribute to their technical leaders, Frank Vorel and Mrs. Rose Lejhanec, who directed all of the drills yesterday.

The younger participants in the demonstration were in no way outdone by their elders, even to the 6 year olds, who, although not competing in the marching and calisthenics, nevertheless showed their skill in a series of games which constituted one number. These included a contest with a pushball, basketballs, and a relay for the younger girls with hoops.

A band stationed in the center of the field supplied the proper tempo for the marchers throughout the program, which was opened with an address in Czecho-Slovakian by Bratr J. Hanzlik, president of the central district of the organization.

Girls Form Letter "S."

One hundred and eighty boys of the first class, embracing those from 10 to 14 years in age, began the day's events with an exhibition of marching and calisthenics, followed by a similar demonstration by girls of the same age. The junior girls then gave a drill which was climaxed with the forming of the letter "S." One hundred junior boys replaced them on the field with another drill.

A picked team of younger boys next gave a flag drill, using the American and Czecho-Slovakian emblems. The older athletes supplied a contrast to their drilling performances with exhibitions on rings, cross and parallel bars, and wooden horses erected on the field.

3 MORE HITS FOR HENDRICK; LIFTS AVERAGE TO .415

For the third successive day, Harvey Hendrick made three hits in four times at bat yesterday and made the only gain of the day among the big six batsmen. Hendrick lifted his average nine more points to a new high of .415, while all other leaders, except the idle Mickey Cochrane, were losing ground. Babe Ruth suffered the worst setback, dropping eleven points to .389. He failed to hit in four times at bat. Standings:

Badger Crew Dark Horse in College Race

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., June 14.—[Special.]—With race time less than forty-eight hours away, the University of Wisconsin crew is rated as the outstanding dark horse of the field of nine crews which will line up for the starter's gun in the varsity race of the Intercollegiate Rowing association regatta Tuesday evening.

The Badgers will be in lane number 6, in the greatest field of varsity eights ever assembled for this thirty-fourth annual classic on the Hudson, which is expected to be the closest race yet seen over this historic 4 mile course.

Never in recent years have so many varsity shells been given a chance to win the title. Six crews are rated as possibilities. Three eastern boats are the favorites, Cornell, Syracuse, and Columbia, with the Wisconsin, California, and Washington eights given the best chance to surprise. Of these, Wisconsin is giving the critics the greatest amount of trouble in their evaluations. An unknown as far as competitive results this year, the Badger eight is nevertheless conceded to be the finest sent out of Madison in recent years and one of the smoothest combinations on the river.

In any ordinary year on the Hudson the Wisconsin varsity would be granted more than an even chance to win the title now in the possession of Cornell. The only factor which causes hesitation in picking the Badgers for a higher place is their lack of competition.

Swerves to Avoid Smash with Automobile.

Eleven persons were injured, one perhaps fatally, last evening when a truck on which fifteen merrymakers were returning to their homes after a beach party overturned at Spaulding avenue and 13th street and an automobile which had swerved to avoid striking them crashed into a pole on the opposite side of the street.

The truck was being driven south in Spaulding avenue by Albert Cohen, 22 years old, 1324 South Albany avenue. Going west in 13th street was the automobile driven by Samuel Smelenski, 40 years old, 1233 South Kedzie avenue. Both drivers turned sharply to prevent a collision.

Cohen was taken to the Mount Sinai hospital, where his condition was regarded as critical. Seven others on the truck, all between 12 and 20 years old, suffered cuts and bruises, as did Smelenski and his wife and their 17 year old daughter.

Two Deaths in County.

Two deaths in Cook county yesterday raised the 1931 motor toll to 503. The victims:

Mrs. Elizabeth Thomen, 55 years old, 108 Home avenue, Oak Park. Killed when a car driven by her husband, Mehafey Thomen, 64 years old, swerved and struck a tree at Washington boulevard and Wesley avenue, Oak Park. Thomen, an employé of Carson, Pirie, Scott & Co., was taken to the Oak Park hospital with a fractured skull.

Seliciano Hernandez, 31 years old, a worker living in a railroad camp at Clearing. Killed when he was struck at 76th avenue and 63d street, Argo, by an automobile driven by Edward Kimball, 12428 South Harvard avenue, Pullman.

Keith Sharpe, 27 years old, 2022 Washburne avenue, a clerk, died in the County hospital yesterday of injuries suffered when he lost control of his motorcycle and was thrown against the pillars of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad viaduct at Fourteenth street and Damen avenue.

Mario Zingarelli, 17 years old, 1316 South Laramie avenue, was seriously injured when he fell asleep while driving a car on East road, near Willow Springs, and crashed into a tree. He was taken to Berwyn hospital.

Raymond Shlemon, 4 years old, 1466 Warner avenue, was seriously injured by an automobile at Greenview and Warner avenues. He was taken to the American hospital. He is expected to die of a fracture of the skull. Mrs. Mary McDonald, 40 years old, 2707 Mildred avenue, driver of the car, was not held.

GIVES STRANGER A RIDE; WALKS HOME PENNILESS

Dominic Mostardi, 42 years old, 547 North Harvey avenue, Oak Park, yesterday joined the ranks of those who in future will give no automobile rides to strangers met on the roads and streets with their thumbs out.

Mr. Mostardi is a member of the Woodmen of the World and secretary-treasurer of a lodge that met yesterday in Hull House social center at 800 South Halsted street. The receipts at the meeting were $340, which Mr. Mostardi placed in his pocket.

He then started to drive home alone in his car. At Polk and Halsted streets, where he stopped for a traffic light, a stranger asked for a lift. Mr. Mostardi obligingly held the door open. As soon as he was comfortably seated the stranger drew a pistol, took the $340 and the car and refused to give Mr. Mostardi a ride.

CARDINAL SEGURA ARRESTED; FATE IS UNDECIDED

MADRID, June 14.—(AP)—Cardinal Primate Segura of Spain has been placed under arrest by the government, it was learned tonight, and is being kept at a convent near Guadalajara, with orders not to leave until further instructions are given him.

From well informed sources it was learned that, although the first intention was to escort the cardinal to the border, Minister of Interior Maura countermanded this proposal and insisted on waiting for a government decision.

THREATEN LIFE OF CAPTOR OF 2 POLICE KILLERS

Frank Rogers, ex-pugilist, ex-aviator, and war veteran, who captured the slayers of Policeman Edward M. O'Donnell, shot down in an attempted holdup Monday, is being guarded by police in the Palmer House. This was revealed yesterday by the state's attorney's office with the disclosure Roger's life had been threatened, presumably by friends of the killers.

Rogers is the state's chief witness against Nick Floridia, 29 years old, and Mike Trotta, 25 years old, whom he captured after they killed the policeman in front of the Schulze Baking company, 25 North Green street. The bandits attempted to rob Miss Lillian Rice, 2828 Abbott court, of $3,000 in checks and cash which she was taking to a bank under guard of O'Donnell.

O'Donnell was shot through the neck as he resisted the bandits. Rogers, who witnessed the attempted holdup from across the street, ran to the fallen policeman, secured his gun, and cornered the bandits.

FRIEND DECLARES TOSCANINI WAS AMBUSH VICTIM

[Copyright: 1931: By the New York Times.]

LUGANO, Switzerland, June 14.—The Fascist assault on Arturo Toscanini at Bologna was not a spontaneous outbreak, but an ambush, according to an uncensored account obtained by a friend of the conductor of the New York Philharmonic Symphony orchestra.

"Toscanini's steadfast independence long has made him a thorn in the side of Fascism. His concepts are veritable rites of art, in which nothing incongruous is permissible. Consequently he has steadfastly refused to play national or political anthems during his concerts.

Fascists Angry.

"The Fascist attitude was well shown by one newspaper which said 'Toscanini, by refusing to play the Fascist hymn, has made a name for himself in politics.' The conductor had refused to play the hymn at Milan, and was forced to leave.

"Consequently, the Fascists sought to force him to play the hymn, 'Giovinezza.' Guido Arpinati, undersecretary of the interior, set out to do so. Into his bailiwick at Bologna he sought to bring the conductor in such a way as to make it hard for him to refuse a request for the hymn.

"Invited to open the season at the Bologna Municipal theater, Toscanini refused on the grounds of illness, thereby sidestepping for a time the trap laid for him. The second attempt, however, succeeded. Two big concerts were organized in Bologna in memory of Toscanini's friend, the late composer, Joseph Martucci. Toscanini was told that Martucci's music alone would be played.

Arrange Fascist Ceremony.

"Secretly, his hosts arranged at Bologna, on the same day, a Fascist ceremony, which was to be attended by high Fascist officials. These personages were also to attend the concerts, and the plan was that their presence would necessitate playing of the Fascist hymn.

"Toscanini was forced by personal reasons to postpone the concerts; the Fascist ceremonies were likewise postponed. On May 14, the final date, Toscanini arrived in Bologna and was ordered to delay his concert until 9:30 o'clock so that the Fascist officials might attend following a banquet. However, when told he must play the Fascist hymn, he flatly refused.

"Fascist hoodlums were placed within the hall and at its doors. As the conductor arrived at the door great crowds surrounded him, demanding that he play the hymn. The old man refused. They fell upon him. Defending himself well, despite his age, but not without being badly beaten, Toscanini was able to gain his car. He went to the Hotel Brun, where for hours he was tormented by a great crowd which surrounded the building and shouted threats of death at him. During the night the conductor managed to escape to his home in Milan."

Injured Merchant Still Ready to Fight Bandits

Charles Jekl, 60 years old, 1465 Byron street, in the Alexian Brothers' hospital after an encounter with bandits on Saturday, reaffirmed a declaration, made many times to friends, that he will never submit docilely to a holdup. Saturday night two bandits entered the Atlantic and Pacific Tea store, which Jekl manages at 2427 North Racine avenue, and pointed revolvers at him and his assistant, Ernest Lexow. Jekl grabbed the revolver of one bandit and leaped on him. After a tussel he was felled by the second bandit. The robbers drove away with $15 taken from the till.

ACTIVE FUTURES SELL LOWER IN WHEAT MARKET

June Crop Eases Up; Trade Narrow.

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Wheat prices moved within a narrow range last week and at the close active futures were 1@2c lower with July ⅝c higher as compared with a week ago. Trading in the latter, however, was light both in Chicago and Minneapolis.

Recent severe losses that upset the trade in June wheat when the farm board announced that it would not continue its purchases, have been recovered, and at Chicago there were net gains of 4¾c, with a close of 71¾c, against 76⅛c at Minneapolis. Kansas City July lost ¾c, and September 1¾c for the week, finishing at 52½c and 57½c respectively.

Minneapolis July gained 1⅜c and September lost 1¾c, the close on the former being 67¼c and 60⅝c for September. Winnipeg was unsettled despite bullish crop reports closed 1@¾c lower for the week, October leading at 65¾c. July closed at 61⅝c.

Attitude of Traders.

Wheat traders who take a broad view of the world situation and consider all points the world over, incline to the bear side, basing their ideas largely on supply, demand and speculative conditions. The latter are reported as against a pronounced bull movement, although these operators say that something might happen to the spring wheat crop in the American and Canadian northwest which has the lowest condition on record at present, and there might be too much rain in the southwest.

Under such conditions they would not be surprised to see an advance of possibly 10c bu, but they do not believe that it would create a sufficiently large volume of new buying after evening up of the shorts to hold the advance. They say that economic conditions are not ripe for bull markets and are not likely to be for some time, although they believe that business conditions have changed for the better and that the extended decline in securities has been checked.

The winter wheat crop is one of the largest ever raised, and they believe that the United States and Canada could both get along with 100,000,000 bu less than last year, owing to the large carryover. The latter is estimated at around 400,000,000 to 450,000,000 bu in both countries, or about 25 per cent of the estimated world's import requirements. Argentina and Australia have more wheat to sell than last year and will have to dispose of it in competition with Russia, and possibly the United States. Should the farm board try to sell its holdings of 200,000,000 bu of old wheat, it will have to do so in competition with other surplus producing countries.

Foreign Millers Timid.

One of the largest cash handlers in the London market expresses the belief that Europe will raise as much, if not more, wheat than last year. Russia is expected to have a good crop and will export about 100,000,000 bu, or practically the same as during the last season. "It must not be lost sight of, however," says the London grain man, "that Russia is to be a big factor in the world situation at all times. Foreign millers and con-

Finland Makes Big Gains in Economic Way

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, June 14.—The economic strides made by the republic of Finland during the first four months of 1931 are revealed in a statement just received here from the Bank of Finland showing imports for the period of 933,400,000 Finnish marks and exports of 931,300,000, or a surplus of imports of but 2,100,000 marks as compared with an import surplus of 228,300,000 during the first four months of 1930.

The republic, which borrowed a total of $50,000,000 here since the war by means of four bond issues, has successively reduced this amount by more than $3,000,000.

Total Funded Debt.

The total foreign funded debt of Finland is placed by the bank at $75,700,000 at the end of April, as compared with $77,400,000 a year ago. However, during that time foreign short term credits to Finland went from $4,900,000 to $7,700,000. At one time last year, in October, the amount of these foreign short term credits reached $10,900,000, but through the expedient of borrowing internally the amount was reduced.

Efforts of the Finnish government to curtail its expenditures are set forth in figures covering the first three months of the year, which show a drop of 107,800,000 marks, as compared with the expenditures during the same period in 1930. However, the drop of state revenues was somewhat greater for the period, amounting to 170,100,000.

Surplus of Exports.

In analyzing the republic's trade figures for 1931 it is pointed out that inasmuch as the surplus of exports over imports for the full year of 1930 amounted to 156,400,000 despite the poor start gained during the first four months of that year, this year's favorable start should result in a much greater surplus of exports this year, since the normal export surplus is heaviest during the summer months.

"Finland's balance of trade in 1931 has proved incomparably more favorable than in the preceding years," the bank's survey points out. "The reduction in the volume of exports in April, 1931, was only about 6 per cent from the April, 1930, figure."

Atlantic Refining company reduced its priced and other companies followed example. The service station price will be 13 cents, tank wagon prices, 11 cents a gallon, exclusive of tax.

RAILROADS SEEK A CLEAR TRACK TO PROSPERITY

Search for Ways to Enhance Profits.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, June 14.—The railroads now have under way the most important program for improvement of their position which they have undertaken in years.

In the case of the railroads generally the move is for a general increase in freight rates. In addition to this undertaking, however, the eastern railways are pushing plans for consummation of consolidation, in accordance with moves which have manifested intermittently over a period of ten years. Both moves reflect conditions which have provided for the railroads the most serious problems they have encountered in a decade.

Drastically reduced traffic and consequent reduction in earnings have made it imperative for the railroads to undertake such means of betterment. In the first four months of this year the railroads moved 116,049,854,000 net ton miles of freight, a decrease of 17.8 per cent on the same period of 1930 and a 23.6 per cent for the same period of 1929. Traffic in April totaled 28,709,632,000 net ton miles, a reduction of 17.7 per cent from April, 1930, and of 25.1 per cent from April, 1929.

Traffic Recessions.

Railroads in all parts of the country participated in this decrease. Traffic in the east decreased 17.5 per cent for the four months and 17.4 per cent in April. Southern traffic decreased 19.3 per cent in four months and 18.2 per cent in April. Traffic in the west decreased 17.7 per cent in four months and 18.1 per cent in April.

This decrease in freight traffic, combined with further declines in passenger traffic, was reflected in railroad earnings. The class I railroads of the entire country had net operating income of $146,136,000 in the first four months of the year against $238,805,000 in the same period last year, which also was a substantial decrease from 1929. Net operating income of the class I railroads in April was $39,074,000 against $62,812,000 in April, 1930, $94,204,000 in April, 1929, and $70,546,000 in April, 1928.

Net operating income of these railroads in all 1930 was $885,011,000, against $1,274,774,000 in 1929. The net income in 1930 was the lowest in nearly a decade and compared with the record earnings of $1,274,774,000 earned in 1929.

Seek 15 Per Cent Rate Boost.

To meet the situation the railroads will file on Wednesday a petition requesting permission to increase rates by as much as 15 per cent in order to obtain a 10 per cent increase in revenue. Clyde Brown, general solicitor of the New York Central railroad, speaking for the general committee of railway executives formed to push the filing of the rate petition, announced today that the plan would be filed with the interstate commerce commission at 10 a. m. Wednesday.

"The joint statement and application of the steam carriers of the United States has been completed," said Mr. Brown. "It will be filed with the interstate commerce commission June 17 at 10 a. m. eastern standard time.

Four System Plan.

Washington, June 14.—(AP)—The eastern four-system railroad consolidation proposal is expected by railroad representatives here to reach the interstate commerce commission before July 1.

Only the "ragged edges" of the plan remain to be smoothed out, it was learned today from an authoritative source, and these are expected to yield at a meeting soon of executives of the New York Central, Pennsylvania, Baltimore and Ohio and Van Sweringen lines. Immediately afterward, it was said, the petition for commission approval may be expected.

Some questions, such as the final payment of the Van Sweringen lines for the Lehigh Valley railroad, now controlled by the Pennsylvania company, were left for future settlement at the meeting last week in New York. Officials said that in this settlement no cash price ever had been mentioned. The Pennsylvania is expected to receive partial payment through an agreement with the Nickel Plate for trackage rights over the latter road along the south shore of Lake Erie.

The exact form the petition will take has not been announced. There may be two. The first would ask amendment of the commission's consolidation plan announced Dec. 9, 1929, whereby five systems were suggested for the east. This petition would contain the outline of the four proposed systems. The other would ask formal approval of the proposed setup and outline how the roads plan to control and operate the lines.

Ten Years Ago in Finance

Stocks swung up again after early break. Two conflicting forces seen at work. One was "signs of continuing belated liquidation for the account of the large speculative interests whose recklessness and bad judgment a year or more ago prepared the way for Wall street's subsequent experiences"; the other was short covering.

Further reductions are made in crude oil prices. All grades quoted in Pittsburgh were reduced 25c a brl, the new prices ranging from $1 to $2.75.

Several more companies announce discontinuance or reduction of dividends.

Bond prices improve generally. Selling of bonds for the protection of speculative accounts is reported to be subsiding.

J. P. Morgan & Co., managers of the recent $100,000,000 twenty year 7½ per cent French government loan, have increased the dealers' commission from 2 to 2½ per cent. The bonds were underwritten for 91 and offered to the public at 95. The amount remaining unsold was not disclosed.

Chicago Man to Head Gen. Outdoor Advertising

Burnett W. Robbins of Chicago has been elected president of the General Outdoor Advertising company, to succeed Kerwin H. Fulton of New York. Coincident with the naming of Mr. Robbins as head of the advertising company it was announced that headquarters fo rthe firm, which operates sixty-two branches, will be moved from New York to Chicago, adding another unit to this city's list of advertising organizations. Mr. Robbins comes to the head of the General Outdoor organization from the post of first vice president and manager of the Chicago office.

Traders Feel Encouraged by Gains in Bond Market

New York, June 14.—(AP)—Although there was nothing sensational about the action of the bond market last week traders and bankers felt encouraged by the general, if gradual, advance in prices. The one exception to this optimism was the slump in German bonds.

The gains were so small and irregular from day to day as to escape notice by many observers. However, a comparison of the closing levels with those of a week previously reveals a broad, if moderate, advance. The closing average price for thirty representative issues composed of ten bonds each of industrials, railroads and public utilities was 94.6, the highest average since May 26.

Will Upturn Continue?

An advancing bond market would be hailed in Wall street as a strong factor in favor of business recovery, but it remains to be seen whether the appreciation of last week is the beginning of such a movement. However, it has been common knowledge for weeks that one of the principal objects of the present easy money policy of the federal reserve system is to stimulate the bond market. This is a strong factor, but it is not the only one necessary for a broad advance. The future alone will reveal whether the long awaited upturn has started.

At any rate the advance was confined pretty much to domestic corporate obligations. As a result of the political and economic uncertainties in Germany, the national, provincial, municipal, public utility and industrial loans of that country suffered wide losses. The declines tended to depress other foreign obligations also.

However, prices of corporate loans will have to rise and remain steady or strong for some period of time before any extensive program of bond flotations can be undertaken.

Many Have High Rating.

That such a time is still some distance ahead might be inferred from the $21,910,000 of new bonds floated last week, the smallest aggregate since the last week of April. The total for the preceding week was $73,110,000.

Equally significant with the reduced total was the fact that more than $9,000,000 of that aggregate consisted of state and municipal obligations. Another $12,894,000 was composed of public utility obligations, principally of short maturities and railroad equipment trust certificates. The great bulk of these securities were of high investment rating. One of the distinctive features of the bond market in recent months has been the persistent demand for gilt edge and high grade obligations.

New evidence of this latter fact appears in the news that ninety-three communities will seek to sell bond issues this week which total $9,642,175. Three issues by the state of Louisiana, city of Montreal and the state of New Jersey aggregate $49,000,000 which indicates that the smaller communities generally are taking advantage of the present strong market for municipal obligations.

I. T. & T. SOON TO CONTROL SWEDISH PHONE COMPANY

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, June 14.—The International Telephone and Telegraph corporation will soon complete arrangements to acquire a dominant interest in the L. M. Ericsson Telephone company of Sweden, one of the two principal foreign rivals of the International organization. This will leave only the German Siemans & Halske company as a competitor for foreign telephone business outside of the General Telephone and Electric corporation, which is sponsored by the Trans-America corporation in this country.

While reports indicated that the substantial interest in the Ericsson company is to be acquired from Kreuger & Toll, which last year bought control of the Swedish Telephone organization, no confirmation was available, although it is anticipated in Wall street that Ivar Kreuger will become a director of International Telephone and Telegraph corporation.

The L. M. Ericsson Telephone company has important manufacturing interests in Sweden and several foreign countries and controls telephone companies in other nations. Of prime importance to International is the Ericsson owned telephone system in Mexico which, though a competitor of International in that country, has arranged intereconnections of service with the American group.

FAIR BUSINESS ACTIVITY NOTED BY WHOLESALERS

Business in the wholesale mercantile field proved the bright spot in Chicago's market activities during the past week, according to trade observers of the Chicago Association of Commerce. Retail sales were quiet throughout the entire city.

Wholesalers were pleased, however, with the volume of business received from out of town merchants. Both the number of buyers and the size of their orders equaled the business transacted in the same period last year. The dollar volume of business done was within a small per cent of last year's sales.

Beneficial results of the Furniture Mart's semi-annual furniture show were revealed in the volume of business handled.

1930 Traffic Between U. S. Ports 9,043,722 Tons

Washington, D. C., June 14.—(AP)—Freight traffic between the Pacific, Atlantic and gulf coasts by water in 1930 totaled 9,043,772 cargo tons as compared with 10,551,195 the previous year. The figures were gathered by the shipping board. This commerce was carried on entirely in American flag vessels operating through the Panama canal. More than 72 per cent of the entire volume of traffic in 1930 originated on the Pacific coast, a total of 6,502,267 tons.

SLUMP PICTURE PAINTED DARKER THAN IT MERITS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, June 14.—The time always comes, in a period of after panic depression in this country, when a survey of the existing situation, whatever aspect of it is examined, discovers only what seems to be indications of still worse things to come.

This description would fit June of 1931, July of 1910, and the autumn of 1894; it fits the state of things today, as conditions present themselves to a despondent community. On all of these previous occasions it was characteristic of financial sentiment of the day that it surrendered its imagination to picturing an indefinite movement of events from bad to worse. Only in the much longer retrospect of another period was it realized how greatly the picture had been darkened by refusal to look on redeeming considerations which had been in the background.

At the moment every one would assign as the paramount factors of discouragement the continuing fall in prices for commodities, the seeming paralysis of consumers' buying, the agricultural situation, the shrinkage of railway traffic and railway revenue, and the economic condition of Germany. It cannot be convincingly said that any cheerful light has yet been cast on these difficult aspects of the situation. But for that very reason it is wisest at such times to inquire what are the mitigating possibilities.

Decline of Ten Years Ago.

The monthly decline in average staple prices cannot easily be separated from the consumer's attitude. We know that their average decline in 1921, whether measured from the high point of 1923 or from the average when the war ended, had been substantially greater than in this reaction. It was a worldwide movement, then as now; it was stopped in 1922, not by a change in the agricultural situation—which grew worse rather than better in that year—but very plainly through the reaching of an "irreducible minimum" in consumers' stocks of goods, the discovery of which condition seemed to be made simultaneously by an army of merchants and retail purchasers. This influence, which came at almost the darkest hour of that depression, necessarily found immediate reflection in the car loadings and the railway revenue.

It is true that gross operating receipts of the railways thus far in 1934 have been considerably smaller even than in 1922 or 1921. But that is not because of decreased traffic compared with that period; it is chiefly because of the steady lowering of

LITTLE CHANGE NOTED IN TRADE ACTIVITY RATE

Retailers' Business Gains; Wholesalers' Slips.

New York, June 14.—(AP)—Business enters the last half of June with little change noticeable in recent rates of activity.

Retail trade, stimulated by store sales and demand for vacation necessaries and extras, looks somewhat better, but the wholesale branch has not fared so well. Retailers are apparently keeping stocks at low levels, endeavoring to maintain a nice balance with consumptive demand.

The fact that the decline into midsummer dullness by most industrial lines has been gradual, unmarked by violent contractions, is regarded as favorable. Of course, the position even at the spring peak was relatively poor and the appearance of a quite normal reaction has been discouraging to producers and sellers of goods. Hopes for much of an improvement before late summer or early autumn are believed unwarranted in many quarters.

Auto Output Slipping.

Automobile production is sliding off and carrying steel with it. Iron Age said the chief reason for the slump to 40 per cent in the operating ratio of the steel mills was the decline in motor car demand, which will influence ingot output for the next two months. The May drop in total automobile production was caused by the recession at the Ford plants. Chevrolet has cut its schedules 20 per cent.

The decline in the United States Steel corporation's backlog was entirely seasonal. The loss, in fact, was less than the average dip for the past seven years. With buyers still cautious, largely because of continued price uncertainties, the industry as a whole is facing a dull two months unless the stronger market by maintaining or extending its gains, brings an unexpected revival in retail sales of automobiles, necessitating a stepup in production.

May Take Months.

Final action on the petition of the railroads for higher freight rates is hardly anticipated before several months have passed, as the prospective hearings will take some time and there is apt to be considerable opposition to the proposal. However, the roads themselves are losing no time in getting their case before the federal commission.

Copper stocks have mounted to record high levels, despite the curtailment agreement among American and European producers last November. Price changes in other commodities tended to offset each other, so that the indices were steadier.

To what extent general confidence has been strengthened by the stronger stock market is problematical, although many observers note a relief from rampant pessimism, which in itself is regarded as constructive. Maintenance of a firm and dull market would be helpful.

Wayne Pump.

I will appreciate any facts you may give me on Wayne Pump company stock, taking into consideration that it is not one of the headliner blue chips and also the fluttering pulse of the seemingly weak hearted stock market. Thank you in advance.—J. T.

Wayne Pump company manufactures a complete line of pumps which are used extensively in service stations and garages. It also manufactures air compressors, auto hoists, and other garage equipment.

Net income has varied. For the fiscal year ended Nov. 30, 1930, net was $479,227, which was 1.94 times preferred dividend requirements and equal to $1.64 per common share.

For the preceding twelve months net income was $704,702, which was 2.90 times preferred dividend requirements and equal to $3.33 per common share. For the 1928 fiscal year net income was $537,363.

On Nov. 30, 1930, current assets were $3,633,647, and current liabilities were $726,437. Cash was $426,408, against $372,942 the year before. Notes payable to bank were $213,716, against $325,000 on Nov. 30, 1929. Working capital was $2,907,210 on Nov. 30, 1930, and $2,762,104 on Nov. 30, 1929.

There are outstanding 69,337 shares of $3.50 no par preferred stock and 138,908 no par common shares. On Nov. 30, 1930, funded debt totaled $2,135,000, anti mortgages payable were $27,350.

Earnings in 1930 were affected by adverse conditions in foreign markets, inventory depreciation and increased expenditures for mechanical research and development work.

Dividends are being paid on the preferred, but none have been reported on the common to date.

The common is a speculation.

We do not attempt to predict the course of the market.

Chicago, Memphis and Gulf R. R.

I would like your opinion and rating on Chicago, Memphis and Gulf Railroad company first 5s. Did the Illinois Central railroad assume payment of these bonds?—C. K.

The entire capital stock of Chicago, Memphis and Gulf Railroad company is owned by the Illinois Central Railroad company, which leases the road. Interest on the first 5s, due Jan. 1, 1940, is provided for under this lease. The bonds are not guaranteed by Illinois Central. The lease is subject to termination on short notice by either party. The bonds constitute a first lien on the entire property. They are suitable for a business man's surplus funds.

owers in general know that there are large available supplies in all countries, especially in North America, and they are indisposed to anticipate requirements even though production should be much less than at present, as the carryover will afford an abundance."

It is said that the farm board, while selling moderate quantities of old wheat, has not disposed of many millions. Millers, however, it is believed, will take a fair percentage of the choice old wheat held by the farm board in case the new crop wheat should be low in protein. As regards the latter, however, it is too early in the season to make definite estimates on this point.

Harvesting Progresses.

Harvesting of new wheat is steadily progressing northward, and inside of two weeks will be on in southern Kansas. Good weather is necessary all over the southwestern winter wheat section for maturing and harvesting the crop.

The five southwestern winter wheat states have 339,000,000 bu, as given by the government report, compared with 346,000,000 bu last month, while a year ago they had 307,000,00 bu, and for the five year average, 266,000,000 bu. These states raise a large percentage of the country's exportable surplus. Southwestern wheat will move for export largely through the gulf ports, and a considerable percentage will be shipped to Kansas City and Minneapolis millers, and will also go to southwestern millers. It is said that the latter are without supplies, and that the milling interests will absorb a large percentage of the movement.

SLIGHT DECLINE IN STEEL OUTPUT NOTED FOR WEEK

Partly Due to Recession in Auto Demand.

New York, June 13.—(AP)—A further slight decline in steel production was recorded last week owing largely to lessening activity of the motor car industry and a smaller call for rails. Otherwise orders were fairly well sustained at the recent low rates and in some quarters of the trade it is estimated that the minimum in demand has been reached in certain lines.

Structural steel awards were moderately large for the season and a better demand is reported for standard pipe, while tin plate output is well sustained. Ingot production is now estimated at 40 per cent of capacity and with no pressure to sell into the third quarter prices are generally unchanged except for further weakness in scrap. Pig iron is dull and unchanged.

Foreign Copper Buying.

Large foreign buying of copper was the chief factor, as domestic consumers were practically out of the market. Sales abroad were made on the basis of 8¼ cents for electrolytic delivery in the Connecticut valley, at which level large producers held firm. However, with the home trade comparatively well supplied, smelters offered metal late in the week at concessions of ¼ of a cent. Buyers held off, owing to an unfavorable view of a increase of almost 31,000 tons in world stocks during May.

As advanced rapidly on reports of the proposed formation of an international pool to withdraw the metal from the market. Buying tapered off at the higher levels, however, and partial reactions occurred.

Lead Demand Improves.

Improved consuming demand for lead occurred partly owing to expectations of reduced output in the next few months. The price was unchanged.

Zinc advanced on a more active demand promoted by a favorable reaction to May statistics. Buying extended into the third quarter but sellers were reluctant to offer beyond that point. Antimony continued to decline as consumers held aloof.

COAST SHIPPING LINES TO CONFER IN WASHINGTON

Washington, June 14.—(AP)—Virtually all of the intercoastal shipping operators invited to a shipping board conference here tomorrow on rate cutting and other problems have accepted. Even the bank which declined to join the new defunct United States intercoastal conference and enter into rate agreements have accepted the invitation extended by Chairman T. V. O'Connor of the board to talk things over.

Invitations had been sent also to the Matson Steamship company, which stated that it was not engaged in intercoastal trade; the Isthmian line, whose interests are virtually identical with the Argonaut line, both being owned by the United States Steel corporation, and the Commercial Steamship company.

The Ford Motor company and Union Sulphur company, industrial carriers, will be represented, the latter by A. R. Fallis, treasurer. Ford's representative was not named.

Rate cutting is the big subject to be considered.

U.S. CHAMBER OF COMMERCE WILL CONTINUE STUDY

Washington, June 14.—(AP)—The United States Chamber of Commerce announced yesterday that studies in every field of commercial and governmental activity will continue during the coming year. Committees to carry on the work are now being formed preparatory to a meeting of the directors on June 26 to outline the program.

Approximately 20 committees which have been carrying on the activities will be continued. About 300 members have been assigned to them. They will study agriculture, banking, foreign commerce, distribution, national resources, transportation, the national fiscal policy, taxation, and economic activites of the government.

CANADIAN AWARDS.

More construction was started in Canada during May than in any previous month this year, the total awards, $36,895,700, were 62.5 per cent over April, according to MacLean Building Reports, Ltd.

$10,000,000 ISSUE OF NORTHERN STATES TO BE OFFERED TODAY

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, June 14.—An additional issue of $10,000,000 Northern States Power company [of Minnesota] refunding mortgage 4½ per cent bonds, series due April 1, 1961, will be marketed tomorrow by a syndicate headed by Harris Trust Savings bank and including H. M. Byllesby & Co., Inc., W. C. Langley & Co., the Guaranty company of New York, A. C. Allyn & Co., Inc., and the J. Henry Schroder Banking corporation. The bonds will be offered at 98½, to yield 4.59 per cent.

Proceeds of this financing will be used to reimburse the company in part for extensions and additions made to its properties, and will be applied to the redemption of an issue of 4 per cent notes due this year. The company is an operating unit of the Standard Gas and Electric company system.

Further details on the new issue of $7,500,000 Portland General Electric company 4 per cent notes, due Jan. 1, 1933, included in last week's offerings, were announced today. The notes were priced at 99¼, to yield more than 4.50 per cent. The offering group was headed by Harris Trust and Savings bank and includes H. M. Byllesby & Co., Inc., the National City company, Halsey, Stuart & Co., Inc., the Continental Illinois company, Inc., E. H. Rollins & Sons, Inc., W. C. Langley & Co., and Albert E. Pierce & Co., Inc.

Formal offering will be made tomorrow of the issue of $3,540,000 city of Milwaukee, Wis., 4¼ per cent bonds, due $177,000 each July 1, 1932 to 1951, at prices to yield 2 to 3.60 per cent. The bonds are issued for viaduct, school and park improvement purposes. The offering group consists of the Continental Illinois company, Inc., the First Union Trust and Savings bank, Harris Trust and Savings bank, the Chatham Phenix corporation, Lawrence Stern & Co., Inc., and the Mercantile Commerce company, St. Louis. The city reports an assessed valuation of $1,016,238,245, and net bonded debt of $48,503,450.

NEW YORK CURB PRICES ADVANCE; VOLUME LOWER

New York, June 14.—(AP)—The curb market made a further response last week to the improved sentiment in speculative circles. Shares moved into new high ground for the advance that started a fortnight ago, successfully resisting spasmodic selling.

The volume of business showed a sharp contraction from the previous week. The daily turnover was generally less than 300,000 shares. Thursday, which proved the busiest session, contributed only 310,000 shares.

Petroleum shares continued to back track from the lowest levels of the year, and as in the previous week, showed the most improvement. Vacuum which a fortnight ago touched its year's low at 22, advanced eight points during the week and closed at 38⅝ for a net gain of 7¼.

Although their daily movements were characterized by irregularity, utilities attracted sufficient support to appreciate and showed a pronounced hardening tendency. Electric Bond and Share showed a net advance of 2¼. American Superpower 1½, and United Light and Power A and United Gas corporation each gained two.

Investment trusts and holding companies shares were quiet and mixed. Insull Utility Investments, Mayflower Associates and Continental Shares were buoyant. Shenandoah and Goldman Sachs sagged.
